THE "RANKER" OFFICER

HE CAN DO LITTLE IN ARMY WITHOUT PRIVATE MEANS.

Some Years Ago the "Gentleman Rankers" Who Could Not Pass Competitive Examinations Entered the Service as Privates and Were Rapidly Advanced to Commissions —Points on Promotion.

The question of giving the private soldier a better chance of gaining a commission in the army than he has at present crops up from time to time. And it has lately been prominently before the British public, owing to the increasing difficulty the authorities find in getting officers from the usual source—that is, the public schools, via Sandhurst and Woolwich.

At present the commissioned establishment of the army is short by nearly 3,000 officers. I will not deal with this rather serious state of affairs beyond remarking that, while the officer's work and duties have been greatly increased, he is still far from being paid a "living wage," says a writer in London Answers. Men with money, naturally enough, are beginning to fight shy of a profession where it is all work and no pay.

Now, as regards promotion from the ranks, I do not know exactly how many ex-rankers there are holding commissions, but there are certainly some hundreds. These may be divided into three classes. First of all, there is the "ex-gentleman ranker."

Twenty years or so ago the competitive entrance examinations for the army were severe, there being about eight candidates for each vacancy. This meant that many gentlemen's sons who would have made good officers were kept out of the army because they had not the gift of being "crammed" by the army tutors, who then used to make an uncommonly good thing of it.

Being keen on soldiering, they used to enlist. Provided they were good men—and sometimes when they were not—they were quickly pushed on. I knew one case where a gentleman ranker was made a lance-corporal within three days of enlistment. A genuine private would have been lucky to get his lance-corporal's stripe under a year.

These gentlemen rankers often got their commissions in two or three years; so that, if they enlisted at, say eighteen, they might be officers by the time they were twenty-one. The system was bad. It meant that the genuine non-commissioned officers were kept back to make way for the gentleman ranker.

His training in the ranks was more or less of a farce. He often paid a man to do disagreeable duties for him. Officers who had got their commissions in the usual way had a right to feel aggrieved. Much money had been spent on their education; they had had to pass hard examinations, and here was the gentleman ranker being pitch-forked into the army at almost the same age as themselves.

Today, owing to the absence of competition, it is much easier to get

TOWN COUNCIL.

Council Chambers,
Monday, July 3d, 1911.

Council met in regular session on Monday evening, Mayor A. S. Kimmerly presiding.

Members present—Reeve Alexander, and Councillors Stevens, Waller and Dickinson.

Minutes of last regular session were read and confirmed.

A communication was read from G. F. Ruttan, in reference to damage sustained to gas engine used by Mr. Foster in Wonderland. It seems that on a recent Saturday Contractor Lytton, on the Dundas street sewer, had informed Mr. Foster that the water pipe crossing the sewer excavation would not be interfered with that day, and in consequence Mr. Foster started his engine, and turned on the water (which is used for cooling the cylinder of the engine) and proceeded to give his usual afternoon show. In the meantime the said water pipe crossing the sewer had been interfered with and the supply of water cut off, and when Mr. Foster went to shut down his engine he found it badly overheated and burned. The engine has been out of commission for the past couple of weeks, and it is the intention to collect for inconvenience and damage to engine.

The communication was referred to the Town Solicitor.

A communication was read from the County Clerk to the effect that the assessment of the town for County purposes had been fixed at $800,000, and a rate of 5 mills on the dollar struck, which would necessitate the town raising $4,000 for County purposes. Filed.

The following communication was received from John W. McCullough, Chief Health Officer of Ontario, re Sewerage system and sewerage disposal:

Dear Sirs.—In respect to the matter discussed with your representatives, I beg to say that for the approval of the Provincial Board of Health there will be required in addition to the plan submitted a detailed report and plan of the proposed disposal plant, showing area, etc., and quantity of sewage to be treated.

Inasmuch as the Board will not permit raw sewage to be drained into the river, it will be necessary that the disposal works be begun and pushed to completion at a reasonable date. If assurance is given of the good faith of the municipality the matter will, if the report, etc., are satisfactory, probably be given approval.

Kindly let me have these details at your earliest convenience.

JOHN W. McCULLOUGH,
Chief Health Officer of Ontario.

Ordered to lay on the table until later in the evening.

The following communication was read from Mr. Chas. Walters, Secretary of the Electric Light Commissioners—man to do disagreeable duties for him. Officers who had got their commissions in the usual way had a right to feel aggrieved. Much money had been spent on their education; they had had to pass hard examinations, and here was the gentleman ranker being pitch-forked into the army at almost the same age as themselves.

To-day, owing to the absence of competition, it is much easier to get a commission by examination than it was. Moreover, for some time the authorities would not promote the ranker with less than six years' service, except for distinguished conduct on active service. He may now get a commission after two years' service.

Anyway, the supply of "gentleman rankers" is now small. A good job, too, I think, because they were often unpopular with both officers and men. The former disliked them for reasons already explained; the latter, for the way they were favored in the ranks.

True, when a gentleman ranker got a commission he was always posted to another regiment; but the men of his new corps knew that he had not really been "through the mill" of the ranks.

The second class of "ranker" is the genuine "ranker," the man born in a humble walk of life, like General Luke O'Connor, V.C., or the late General Sir Hector Macdonald, who wins a commission by sheer force of merit and character.

There are very few of them. On the other hand, there are plenty of men in the ranks who deserve commissions, and would make excellent officers. Yet they remain uncommissioned.

In most cases, it is simply a question of ways and means. In ordinary circumstances a junior officer must have at least $500 a year private means over and above his pay, and he will need that for from six to ten years, until he "gets his company" is promoted captain—when he may just be able to live on his pay.

The genuine ranker seldom has $500 a year private means, or any private means at all, and if he takes a commission he will probably have to resign it long before he has any chance of qualifying for pension. Nevertheless, it is possible for the genuine ranker without private means to become an officer, and to live as such without getting into debt or going to India. I am such a one, for I belong to the third, and by far the largest class of ranker officer—namely, those holding commissions as quartermasters or ridingmasters, with honorary rank as lieutenant, captain, or major.

The ridingmaster of a mounted corps is perhaps better off than a quartermaster. He gets slightly better pay—10s. 6d. a day minimum—and his work is more interesting. I am occupied chiefly with quarters, stores, and interminable accounts, while he has the more virile work of making the raw recruit into the finished horseman.

Until all officers are paid enough to live on, it is almost useless for a penniless man to enlist with a view to gaining a full commission; but as quartermasters and ridingmasters there are good openings in the army for any man, irrespective of the state of life into which he is born.

To take off Corps — No matter how bad.

tary of the Electric Light Commissioners:—

To the Mayor and Council.

At a special meeting of the Board of Elecric Light Commissioners, held on Friday last, at which Mr. Holland, assistant engineer of the Hydro Electric Commission, was present, the following resolutions were passed:

1. Moved by Commissioner Miller, seconded by Commissioner Kimmerly, that the Hydro Electric Commission be requested to examine the proposed by-law re the sale of the municipal lighting plant and to report at its earliest convenience as to its reasonableness and as to the advisability of the Town of Napanee passing the same, also that the Commission be asked to advise us as to the prospect of obtaining power through the Hydro Electric Commission, and to give us as early as possible all available figures regarding the same.

2. That in view of the fact that we have asked for a report from the Hydro Electric Commission we deem it advisable to ask the Municipal Council to defer the submission of the by-law until the report on the same from the Commission has been received.

I am instructed to say that the Commissioners would like to have the Council approve of their action of submitting the by-law to the Hydro Electric Commission, and also to defer submitting the by-law in accordance with the second resolution.

Mr. Holland stated to the Commissioners that the services of the Commission for work of this nature were free of charge, and also that they would send a representative to Napanee to report to the Council, and if desired would address the ratepayers at a public meeting.

On motion of Councillors Waller and Stevens, the communication was ordered filed.

Moved by Coun. Waller, seconded by Coun. Stevens, that in reference to the communication from the Provincial Health Officer, that Mr. Wright, engineer, be asked to prepare the necessary plans for works asked for by the said Health Officer. Carried.

Coun. Waller informed the Council that several citizens had been asking him for information in reference to erecting refreshment booths on the streets on the 12th of July.

The Clerk informed the Council that according to his recollection the town by-law governing streets covered the question brought up by Coun. Waller, and that the Chairman of Streets had full power to regulate the same.

Moved by Coun. Dickinson, seconded by Reeve Alexander, that any citizen be granted temporary use of the streets for booths on July 12th, under the supervision of the Chairmen of Streets. Carried.

THE ELECTRIC LIGHT BY-LAW.

The more the ratepayers examine the agreement and by-law which proposes to sell the town plant to The Seymour Power Company the more popular does this agreement become. Compared with the agreements under which other towns are working, Napanee will secure excellent terms, in some particulars a good deal better than most towns enjoy and electric lights under the proposed agreement will be as low as anywhere else when a similar consumption of current is sold. In addition Napanee will have a first class steam plant always ready to be used in case of emergency, an insurance for light which most towns have not. With cheap power available for manufacturers and the Napanee Water power developed to its full capacity, the town will be in an exceptionally good position to offer inducements to manufacturers, and negotiations are already under way for the starting of at least one new industry in Napanee, for which plenty of water, cheap power and competitive rates by rail and water are a necessity. Should the by-law carry all these advantages will be immediately available. The Seymour Company have a large amount of power for sale and are locating manufacturers at various places along their transmission lines and Napanee should be added to the list of towns where the company may offer the necessary inducements to manufacturers to locate. The company are not receiving an exclusive franchise, but one which may be terminated at

It is also understood that the user of electric energy for lighting purposes as above, is to have the privilege to use electric energy for usual domestic purposes, such as heating flat irons, running dustless cleaners, sewing machines, and other small matters of a similar kind, and also under regulations as to attachments to be approved by "the Company" to run a motor requiring 25 horse power or less at the said rate of three cents per kilowatt hour. The power used shall be governed by and included in one of other of the above rates as may be decided by the said consumer.

4. "The Company" is to have the right to operate the present system of lighting streets, residences and other buildings, which it takes over as it is, subject to such improvements and repairs as may be deemed necessary under the conditions hereinafter set out.

5. "The Company" shall erect the poles, crossarms, guys, braces, wires and light appliances on the streets and highways at their own expense and to the satisfaction of system of the said town, provided that "the Company," in extending such system beyond the limits provided in the schedule mentioned in the preceding paragraph hereof, shall not be required to carry its lines a greater distance from light to light or from its lines then in excess of 400 feet, except upon terms of "the Corporation" paying the actual cost of labor, poles and wiring, only for the additional distance, except in case the said extension of such system provide an annual revenue of at least ten per centum of the cost of said extension, and when such lights are so erected and installed they shall be maintained and lighted from the date of their erection and be paid for by "the Corporation" on the same terms and conditions as those then existing up to the termination of this Agreement.

6. "The Company" shall furnish, erect and maintain all poles, wiring, lamps, connections and fixtures, including crossarms and brackets, as may be required for the said lighting system, and shall keep in proper repair all such poles, lamps, wires and fixtures, and in case of any suits for damages caused by the electric current for or by reason of the poles, wires and every other matter connected with said lighting system "the Company" will defend all such suits at its own expense and pay all damages and costs for which "the Corporation" may become liable by reason of such suit or suits.

7. "The Company" agrees that the poles for street circuits shall be kept painted and shall not be dangerous or unsightly, or such as to incommode the adjoining property owner unnecessarily, and that the same shall be erected in a manner reasonably satisfactory to "the Corporation," or to its Council, and the written approval of the Clerk of "the Corporation," or other officer designated for such purpose by the Council of "the Corporation," shall be necessary for any new lamps erected under this Agreement, but such approval shall not relieve "the Company" from responsibility in case of accident or injury to person or property.

8. 9. 15. "The Company" shall maintain at its own expense an efficient system of patrol for inspecting the entire street lighting system, while the lamps are burning, at least twice a week, so that any lamp which fails to burn properly shall be promptly reported, and put in order, or immediately replaced. 21. "The Corporation," through its proper officers, shall, upon being satisfied as to the correctness thereof, certify the accounts of "the Company," for all services performed by "the Company" in each preceding month, and the accounts so certified after being approved by the said officers shall duly be paid by the Treasurer of "the Corporation" not later than the fifteenth day of the month following that in which the services are rendered.

22. The poles, wires, conductors, and every article, appliance and apparatus which may be necessary for electric energy, are to be furnished and maintained by "the Company" at its own cost and expense, and the lamps, wires and other conductors shall be thoroughly insulated and "the Corporation" shall not be held responsible for any injury or accident which may be occasioned by the poles, wires, conductors or electric current. "The Company" hereby further agrees that it will indemnify and save harmless "the Corporation," its officers, agents and servants, and each and every one of them against and from all suits and actions of every nature and description brought against any of them, and against and from all damages and costs to which it, they or any of them may be put to by reason of injury to the person or property of another, resulting from any improper or defective material, machinery, implement, appliances, or from any placing of poles, wires or other appliance used in performing this Agreement, or from any act of omission or commission claimed against "the Corporation" or "the Company," or the officers, servants or agents of each, in connection with matters involved under this Agreement or performing the services contemplated hereunder.

23. No rights or privileges to erect poles, wires or other appliances are conferred by this Agreement other than those required for the fulfilment hereof.

24. In case of a fire within the limits of "the Corporation," "the Company" shall have a man on the scene forthwith and within a reasonable time after the alarm has been given, who will cut or remove such lines or wires as may interfere with the work of the firemen, and as to this the Captain of the Fire Brigade shall be the sole judge. In case the man representing "the Company," as aforesaid, is not at the scene of the fire within the time mentioned the Captain of the Fire Brigade, or person in charge of the Brigade at the time, may remove or cut the wires, or may direct the same at his or their own risk, and it shall be the duty of "the Company" as soon as possible thereafter to render harmless the wires and lines and to restore them at once after the exigencies which caused their removal have ceased to exist, without expense to "the Corporation"; provided no rebate shall be asked for, or deducted by "the Corporation" for any lights which may be extinguished by such contingencies.

terminated by a Judge of the County Court of the County of Lennox and Addington whose decision shall be final thereon, and in the event of cancellation "the Company" shall forthwith remove all its poles, wires, and other appliances which are used in connection with electric lighting and furnishing heat and power as defined in this Agreement which are within the limits of the Town, to points outside the limits of the said Town.

31. "The Company" further covenants and agrees to furnish power, if desired, up to the extent of 1000 horse power by January 1st, 1912, for use in the said Corporation, and that the maximum charge for electric energy supplied under contract for power to customers in the said "Corporation" shall not exceed $25.00 per annum per horse power for a twenty-four hour service or at the option of the purchaser a stand by charge of Twelve Dollars per horse power per annum of connected load plus a meter rate of one cent per horse power hour.

32. And "the Company" further covenants and agrees that the service it will give for light, heat and power shall be continuous for twenty-four hours daily.

33. "The Company" further agrees that if the prices charged by it for electric lighting, heating and power shall, at the end of any three years, after it has commenced to distribute electric lighting in the said "Corporation," be unsatisfactory to the said "Corporation," or the citizens thereof, that it will upon six months' notice in writing from the Municipal Council of the said "Corporation" submit the question of the rates charged to the Board of Railway Commissioners for Canada.

34. It is further agreed by and between "the Corporation" and "the Company" that "the Corporation" shall have the right, power and privilege at any time after the expiration of ten years from the date of completion of the purchase of "the Property," under this Agreement, upon giving three months' notice in writing of their intention so to do, to "the Company," their successors or assigns, to purchase all "the Property," as it then exists, except that portion of the distributing system used by "the Company" to supply electric energy to consumers using twenty horse power or over, and in case of purchase "the Company" agrees to allow "the Corporation" to use any of its poles for stringing of the wires of "the Corporation's" system, on condition that "the Corporation" do pay to "the Company" annually for the use of such poles, the same amount as is charged for taxes against said poles so used, and "the Company's" wires thereon.

35. In the event of "the Corporation" taking over the distributing system as aforesaid at the end of ten years, or any time thereafter, within thirty years of the date of the transfer of "the Property," "the Company" shall have the right to use the streets and highways of "the Corporation" under the conditions of this contract where then applicable for the purpose of supplying electric energy to consumers using twenty horse power or over at the rates hereinbefore provided until the termination of thirty years from said date, but in no event shall said energy be used for lighting in any premises other

HISTORIC PEARLS ARE FOUND

DISCOVERED IN A SCOTTISH CURIOSITY SHOP.

Worn By Mary Queen of Scots At Execution—Bought For Song, Sold For $80,000.

After many centuries, and in a curious way, a historic necklace of black pearls which Mary, Queen of Scots, wore on the morning of her execution at Fotheringay Castle, has been recovered in a romantic way. From that morning when, at the foot of the scaffold the ill-fated Queen distributed her jewels and money among her friends, the black pearl necklace had been lost sight of, and was only recently unearthed in an old curiosity shop in a small village in Scotland. The keeper of the shop parted with the pearls to a lady customer for $8.12, but there was then nothing to indicate their real value. Now experts have declared that they are incomparable, and, in fact, they have been resold for no less a sum than $80,000.

NECKLACE BOUGHT FOR SONG

It seems that a short time ago a lady, riding her bicycle in Scotland accidentally broke the chain by which her eye-glasses were suspended. Remembering that in a little shop she had seen a few strings of beads and other trifles dear to youthful village maidens, she rode there to see if she could find something to replace for a time her broken chain. Upon examination none of the articles in the shop seemed likely to serve her purpose, and she was on the point of leaving when the old lady behind the counter said: "I have got an old necklace that might do, but it is much more expensive. Shall I fetch it for you?" A necklace of rather large, dull-looking "beads" was produced. It did not seem to be quite what was wanted, but the curious workmanship of the clasp took the lady's fancy, and for the sum of twelve shillings and six-pence she became its owner, and to it attaching her eye-glasses she resumed her ride.

OFFERED $30,000 FOR THEM.

To her purchase she attached but little importance, but, being one day in London, a friend, noticing the "beads," admired them not a little and expressed a wonder as to where such a pretty string had come from. It so chanced that shortly afterwards the owner of the "beads" had occasion to visit the shop of a dealer in antiques, her object being the purchase of a grandfather clock, and while there she showed her "beads" to the dealer, asking him what he thought of them. After short inspection, the dealer became quite animated, fingering each "bead" in turn, and asking so many questions as to how and when the lady had become their owner, that her curiosity was completely aroused. Wondering what it could all mean, she took her "beads" to a jeweller of repute. Here they again excited great interest, but this time words were accompanied by deeds, for the jeweller said that if she cared to part with them, he thought he could get her as much as six thousand pounds!—for he said, "They are

And the said "Corporation" shall, and will, pay to the said "Company" for each incandescent electric light so lighted on the public streets, squares, lanes and highways in the Town of Napanee for the full number of nights as hereinbefore provided, the sum of $15.00 per year, payable monthly, as hereinbefore mentioned, during the continuance of this Agreement, provided, however, that the above incandescent lights do not include those lights in the Band Stand, Harvey Warner Park, and in front of Town Hall, Fire Hall and Library, which are to be paid for at the meter rate, and provided further that the "Corporation" shall pay $2.00 per annum for each of the four-candle power lights at the fire alarm boxes.

27. This Agreement in so far as it requires "the Company" to furnish lights for the streets and other public places shall commence and continue in force for a period of ten years from the date of the transfer of "the Property" to "the Company," with right of renewal for another ten years if desired by "the Corporation," and a further right of renewal at the end of that term if "the Corporation" desires. The desire of "the Corporation" to extend this Agreement as above shall be signified by its giving to "the Company" six months' notice in writing of its intention so to do.

28. "The Company" is to have free access at all reasonable times to the premises on which the current is used, to read meters or to determine if the current is being carried, distributed and used in a proper or improper manner, or for the purpose connected with this Agreement.

29. "The Corporation" is not to be permitted to use the current furnished to it for any purpose or in any place other than is provided for in this Agreement, except for its own use, without having first obtained the written consent of "the Company."

30. It is further agreed that if "the Company" shall fail to carry out this Agreement and is in default in the aggregate for a period of three months out of any twelve months, except such default shall be occasioned by fire, water, rebellion, flood, the acts of God, of the King, or the enemies of the King, or other cause or causes of a like nature, "the Corporation" shall, in addition to its claim for damages, if any, have the right to cancel this Agreement. If "the Corporation" claims the right to cancel this Agreement under this clause, and "the Company" denies its right, the question whether "the Corporation" has the right to cancel this Agreement shall be de-

31. And it is hereby provided that in case "the Corporation" and "the Company," their successors or assigns, cannot agree upon the said value or price to be paid for that portion "the Property" so to be purchased under Section 34, the same shall be ascertained by arbitration under the provisions of the "Arbitration" Act.

32. "The Company" will maintain the said power house as now existing and under operation in condition for immediate service, from the date of completion of purchase until such time as it may be permitted by resolution of the Council of "the Corporation" by a two-thirds vote of the whole Council at a regular meeting thereof, to dismantle and dispose of the same.

33. Nothing in this contract shall be construed to give "the Company" an exclusive franchise or exclusive use of the streets for the purpose of supplying electric energy for light, heat and power.

34. If this Agreement and the franchise hereby given be continued in "the Company" for the period referred to of full thirty years, at the expiration of said period "the Company" shall remove all its poles, wires and other appliances which are used in connection with electric lighting and furnishing heat and power as defined in this Agreement, which are within the limits of the town, to points entirely outside of the limits of said town.

35. It is further agreed that the expression "financial standing," used in paragraph number 6 hereof, shall be satisfied in the case of any person applying for electric light who will pay for the connection with his premises if anything is due for the same hereunder, and will pay in advance the sum of five dollars as a guarantee to "the Company" for the payment of its accounts, said sum of five dollars to be returned to such person at the end of twelve months after such payment if all accounts against him to said time are duly paid.

36. "The Company" agree to give to "the Corporation," within thirty days after the third reading of the By-law confirming this Agreement, the bond of the Electric Power Company, Limited, in the sum of $5,000.00 for the due execution by "the Company" of all the terms of this Agreement.

ONLY HIS PAST LIFE TAINTED

"But why does your father object to me?" demanded the humble suitor.

"Because," explained the haughty beauty of proud lineage, "papa says his ancestors have always been gentlemen of leisure, and you have to work for a living."

"Well, tell him I don't expect to after we are married," replied the humble suitor.

STRANGE DESERT SAND.

Sands found in parts of the great African desert have some peculiar properties. When gathered up in the hand and rubbed violently the small particles are said to become cooler than if touched while in no motion. Some of the particles from a few feet in depth are hotter than those found on the surface. A little of the sand blown through a tube will emit a peculiar sound, as if hot water were being poured on ice.

To cook salt fish nicely, it should be soaked in cold water the night before it is used, with a few spoonfuls of vinegar. Place it in cold water to cover, and gradually bring to the boil. Simmer for a quarter of an hour.

terest, but this may be accompanied by deeds, for the jeweller said that if she cared to part with them, he thought he could get her as much as six thousand pounds!—for he said, "They are black pearls of fair quality!"

Fortunately for herself, instinct prompted her to decline this offer, and, having related her experience to a friend, upon her advice she betook herself to one of the acknowledged experts in matters connected with antiquities in general and of ancient jewellery in particular. Here a brief examination of

and a glance at a book of reference were sufficient. "This, madam, is the string of black pearls worn by Mary, Queen of Scots, on the day of her execution. The pearls have suffered by neglect, but I can buy them from you, should you wish to sell them for sixteen thousand pounds. I shall re-sell them at a profit to a customer if you accept my offer, which remains open for your consideration as long as you like." After consulting her friends the lady did accept the offer, and shortly afterwards the old shop woman in the little Scotch village was equally delighted and astonished to receive a cheque for one thousand pounds. So, for the first time, as far as we know, since that grey day in the month of February, 1587, when the grim headsman's axe laid low the loveliness of ill-fated Mary Stuart, the pearls that enriched the neck which, a writer of the times tells us, was "graceful beyond compare," will once more serve to enhance a woman's charms, while for 300 long years and more their erstwhile royal owner, for whose fair beauty men were ready to risk their lives and fame, has lain forgotten in the sleep that knows no waking.

STEAMERS IN A COLLISION

One Sunk and Passengers Rescued With Difficulty

A despatch from Quebec says: The steamer Aranmore, a few miles below Murray Bay, in a dense fog, at 1 o'clock in the morning, ran down and sank the steamer General Wolfe. Both boats were owned by the same firm, Holliday Brothers, of this city. Those on board the General Wolfe report that they saw nothing of the other ship until the shock occurred. The Aranmore struck the Wolfe on the starboard side, causing her to swing around, and then, after the recoil, struck her again on the port side. The General Wolfe sank in 25 minutes, and lies in 30 fathoms of water, having carried down with her a valuable cargo, consisting in part of two or three hundred cases of salmon destined for the United States, especially bought up by a dealer for the Fourth of July market. Both ship and cargo are insured.

Immediately after the shock both vessels launched their lifeboats, and all the passengers and crew of the Wolfe were rescued.

Most of the passengers of the wrecked vessel were residents of the coast. In the confusion and darkness seven of the passengers fell into the water, and their cries for help are described as heart-rending. These cries were their only means of being saved.

GERMANY SENDS GUNBOAT

French Feeling Aroused Over Intervention in Morocco

A despatch from Berlin says: Germany took direct action in Morocco and ordered the gunboat Panther to Agadir, the most southern port of Morocco, twenty-three miles southeast of Cape Ghir.

The official announcement says that the step was taken at the request of German firms in South Morocco for protection to the lives and property of Germans and native proteges in Morocco, and that unfriendly intentions toward Morocco are not involved.

Agadir is near Mogador, a fortified seaport on the Atlantic, upon which according to earlier rumors, Germany has designs.

Astonishment is the word used in semi-official circles to describe French feelings over the action of Germany in sending a gunboat to Agadir, Morocco.

It is declared that the move is not in accordance with the spirit either of the Algeciras act or the Franco-German agreement of February, 1909, which recognized Germany as having pre-eminent commercial rights in Morocco, but France as having predominant political rights.

It is pointed out that France is capable of maintaining order and protecting foreign interests in Morocco, for which purpose she despatched an army to Fez and Mequinez.

TRAGEDY IN A SHANTY.

John G. Taylor Held for Murder at Vancouver.

A despatch from Vancouver says: John G. Taylor, a resident of the city for the past eighteen years, and now in his seventy-sixth year and a veteran of the civil war, existing chiefly on his monthly pension, is to night in police custody.

Standing up in one of the rapidly-moving cars on the roller coaster at Hanlan's Point, Fred Swallow overbalanced himself and fell out, receiving injuries from which he died later in St. Michael's Hospital.

Swallow was struck by a car which followed the one in which he was a passenger. It is against the rules for anybody to stand up in

BOGUS BILLS CIRCULATING.

Dominion Police Visit Lindsay and Orillia.

A despatch from Vancouver says: John G. Taylor, a resident of the city for the past eighteen years, and now in his seventy-sixth year and a veteran of the civil war, existing chiefly on his monthly pension, is to night in police custody, facing the charge of murder. The dead man is Eli McCutcheon, a logger, thirty years of age, unmarried, and formerly of Nanaimo. According to the police, the tragedy followed a row in a shack in the east end of the city, in which Taylor lived alone. McCutcheon and several companions had visited the old man late in the afternoon. There was not, it is said, any drinking, but a dispute arose, ending in Taylor ordering all to leave. McCutcheon declined, and the old man is said to have instantly fired a rifle, the bullet entering McCutcheon's thigh. All vanished, leaving McCutcheon to bleed to death.

BLIND LOVERS TO MARRY.

Couple Born without Sight Take Out License to Wed.

A despatch from Fresno, California, says: Behind a marriage license issued on Wednesday to Ernest L. Morris, a well-known blind piano tuner, and Effie M. Sullivan, of Iowa, also blind, is an unusual romance. Although they have known each other from childhood, neither has seen the other, for they were born blind.

Love began in the Iowa State Home for the Blind when Morris, now 29, was 10 years old, and his bride-to-be, now 35, was 16. They learned to read and write there, and ever since have kept up correspondence. Recently Morris asked the girl to join him in California, and she consented.

KILLED ON THE "DIPS."

Man Stood Up in Car at Hanlan's Point.

A despatch from Toronto says:

receiving injuries from which he died later in St. Michael's Hospital.

Swallow was struck by a car which followed the one in which he was a passenger. It is against the rules for anybody to stand up in the cars while on the journey. His car had just left the lowest dip when he stood up and fell out. His right leg and arm were broken and he was internally injured. The injured man was hurried over in a special ferry and on being carried into the hospital he expired. Death was due to the internal injuries.

INFANTILE PARALYSIS.

Investigation Being Made by Conservation Commission.

A despatch from Ottawa says: An investigation into the prevalence of infantile paralysis is being conducted by the Dominion Conservation Commission. Circulars are being forwarded to every medical practitioner in Canada asking for particulars of the cases with which he has had to deal. Investigations are also being conducted into the housing conditions in Canadian centres of population, and the existence of slum districts.

Municipal building by-laws and building regulations are being examined, and a comparison made with those in use in the better regulated cities of foreign countries.

FIVE PEOPLE KILLED.

Electric Train Ran Into Wagon Near Rockaway Beach.

A despatch from New York says: An electric train on the Long Island Railroad, ran into a wagon at the crossing at the point where the Rockaway Beach branch of the railroad crosses Woodhaven Avenue in Glendale, Sunday. Five people, who were riding in the wagon, were killed and the sixth person in the wagon and the train conductor were severely injured.

FIRE ON U. S. BATTLESHIP.

Magazine Flooded to Prevent an Explosion.

A despatch from New York says: Fire in the after-turret of the battleship Ohio, in the naval yard at Brooklyn on Wednesday, necessitated the flooding of the powder magazine below, as a precaution against an explosion. The fire smoldered for half an hour along the heavy rubber insulation of electric wires and a quantity of cotton waste. A redhot rivet dropped on the insulation and started the blaze.

The powder magazine, situated about seven feet below the turret, contained a ton and a half of powder, and a large quantity of other ammunition. There were 750 officers and men on the Ohio. The battleships North Dakota and Alabama were at anchor near by, and there was considerable excitement on board all the ships as well as in the navy yard.

MEXICO SETTLING DOWN.

Trade Conditions Again Becoming Normal.

A despatch from Ottawa says: A. W. Donly, the Canadian Trade Commissioner in Mexico, has sent in a report to the Trade and Commerce Department, in which he declares that the recent revolution had a most serious effect upon business. Canadian trade felt the effect to about the same degree as that of other countries. Millions of money had been shipped abroad for safe-keeping.

Mr. Donly adds, however, that the country is settling down to the new regime, and that an improvement may be looked for from now on.

ORIGINAL CHARTER FOUND.

Queen's University Recovers Highly Prized Document.

A despatch from Kingston says: Queen's University is in possession of a very valuable document, none other than the original charter granted the university over sixty years ago, and which in some way or other had disappeared from sight, vanishing no man knew where. It came to light, however, in an unexpected quarter, when Col. S. C. McGill, managing director of the Frontenac Loan Co., ran across it in the vaults of that company. It was enclosed in a tin casing, and was in splendid condition, with the signature of Queen Victoria herself well preserved and the great seal quite intact.

BOGUS BILLS CIRCULATING.

Dominion Police Visit Lindsay and Orillia.

A despatch from Ottawa says: Inspector Parkinson, of the Dominion police, has been in Lindsay investigating the circulation of bogus money, and may have to go back.

A man named Watt was arrested in Orillia and convicted in connection with the prevalence of bad money, but some of the green goods is said to be in circulation in Lindsay, and other arrests may follow. A lot of bad money appears to have been turned out in Ontario recently, and the Dominion police are investigating in several localities.

TWO MEN KILLED.

Within a Few Yards of Each Other Near Winnipeg.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: Two fatalities occurred within a few hundred yards of each other on Thursday evening at Fort Rouge. A Canadian named Sherlock got on the Grand Trunk Pacific train going west, instead of the Canadian Northern for Prince Albert, and finding out his mistake at the Pembina subway, a mile from the station, jumped from the train, crushing his head in the fall.

The other case was that of a foreigner, Alex. Signyk, who picked up a live wire while at work in the C. N. R. shops, Fort Rouge. He was dead when help arrived. Inquests are likely in both cases.

BREAK IS UNPRECEDENTED.

Accident at Port Hood Mine Regarded as Remarkable.

A despatch from Halifax, N. S., says: Hiram Donkin, Deputy Commissioner of Mines, said on Wednesday that the accident to the coal mine at Port Hood is unprecedented in the annals of mining. The breaks have occurred previously in submarine mines, but never at the very bottom of the mine, in this case, 1,030 feet below the tide level. The break was as unexpected as would be a bolt of lightning from a clear sky, and the remarkable and mysterious thing is that it occurred at the extreme bottom of the mine.

DIVED HEADLONG FROM CAR.

Miraculous Escape of Shackled Lunatic.

A despatch from Montreal says: With legs shackled to his sides George Kepla, a lunatic, took a headlong dive through the window of a Grand Trunk train near Coteau on Wednesday night.

Although the train was travelling at 25 miles an hour, the man was picked up conscious, suffering only from a deep scalp wound.

Kepla was one of five undesirables being taken from the asylum at Seattle, Wash., for deportation to Germany from Montreal.

Nearing Coteau he became restive and the shackles were put on, but despite this he evaded the United States immigration officials in charge of the undesirables and dived headlong through the window.

SCORE INJURED IN WRECK

Express Train Crashed Into a Freight Locomotive

A despatch from Philadelphia says: The engineer and one passenger were probably fatally injured and 20 other passengers badly cut, bruised and scalded on Wednesday night when an express train bound for Chestnut Hill collided with the tender of a freight locomotive at the entrance of the Philadelphia and Reading Railway's tunnel at 21st Street and Hamilton Avenue. Benjamin H. Dolan, aged 43 years, is the injured engineer. One of his legs was broken in three places and he was so badly scalded that physicians despair of saving his life.

The passenger who is believed to be dying is Ernest W. Evans, aged 27 years, of Asbury Place, Chestnut Hill. His face is badly crushed and he was severely scalded.

After the engine had crushed into the tender, the first coach of the train slipped past the obstructions, but the following coaches were thrown on their sides. The cars were filled with passengers bound for the suburbs. When they were overturned the escaping steam from the damaged locomotive caused a panic.

THE WHISKERS OF KINGS

HOW THE WORLD'S MONARCHS WEAR THEIR BEARDS.

The Late King of Italy Could Tie the Ends of His Moustache Behind His Ears.

King George is shown on the new coinage as being the happy possessor of a neat little beard and a good crop of hair on his head, the latter despite the fact that his crop of hair is by no means excessive, says Pearson's Weekly.

When King Edward's portrait came to be impressed on our coinage and postage stamps, the authorities were in a quandry—could they set the imprint of a bald-headed King on the coinage?

They appealed to his Majesty, and asked to be allowed to show him as the possessor of a fine head of hair. But the King would have none of it. Let me appear as I am, or don't let me appear at all, said he in effect, and he had his way. He appeared on stamps and coinage as a bald-headed monarch. And that was unique, for such a thing had never happened before.

The Tsar of Russia is very like our own King—he has the same sort of beard and moustache, and resembles King George in many other ways.

If you want something out of the common, turn to the German Emperor. His moustache is a world's institution, and he has worn it in every possible and impossible way.

NO BEARD FOR THE KAISER.

In its day it has drooped down and stood out as if cut in marble, but of late years he has worn it standing up at right angles to the mouth, and certainly the Kaiser looks a very fierce monarch indeed with his present style of moustache.

At one time he tried to grow a beard, but was obliged to shave it off, for the Empress refused to tolerate it, and his people were thankful when he did shave, for they liked his beard no better than did the Empress.

If you want to know the name of the monarch who owned the most magnificent moustache, his name may be given—King Victor Emanuel of Italy. His was something like a moustache, as may be judged from the fact that one of his pet amusements was to tie the ends of it behind his neck.

But, alas! King Victor Emanuel dyed his moustache; it was really a light brown one, but it occurred to him that light brown was hardly a warlike color, so he resorted to the dye pot, and manufactured a black one, or, at any rate, a dark brown.

King George of Greece has two moustaches—one is for family use, so to speak, the other is for ceremonial occasions. When he is in the midst of his family circle his moustache droops gently down—he is then quite the family man. But if he goes out of his own country, or has to attend any great State ceremony his moustache stands out at right angles to his face, and is delightfully waxed at the points.

King Alfonso of Spain is hard at work just now raising a moustache, but to all appearances he finds the work none too easy. Still, there is

AERONAUT'S DARING FLIGHT

Lincoln Beachey Circled Over the Falls in Aeroplane

A despatch from Niagara Falls, N. Y., says: The many famous feats of Niagara, where hazardous man has braved nature's gravest perils, were outdone in the sensational flight of Lincoln Beachey, the aviator, who swept down from an immense height in a rain at dusk on Wednesday night, circled twice over the Falls, then dove down under the great steel bridge, on down the Gorge almost to the Whirlpool Rapids, rose again, and, skimming over the wooded bluffs, soared off again to safety on the Canadian side.

More than 150,000 people stood transfixed with awe as the birdman's air craft rocked and rose over his perilous course. It was the first time an aviator had ever dived with the deadly currents of the canyon. His flight is looked upon as the most daring ever made by an aviator.

At moments as he flew above the cataract and between the precipitous sides of the lower river, Beachey and his white machine were obscured in spray and mist. Racing down the Gorge, his speed approached sixty miles an hour.

The start was made from the baseball ground adjoining Niagara University, about a mile from the Falls, and, after the perilous journey, a safe landing was made in a field on the outskirts of Niagara Falls, Ont.

"There was just one time I was a little nervous," he said. "That was when I got down between these two great walls and the plane began to rock and swerve. I was afraid the Gorge had me. The water was only a few feet below. That's why I did not go all the way to Lewiston. I had had enough for one day and was quite happy after I got over the cliff and was ever in Canada."

THE NEST.

Robert and Josephine were much excited when they saw a bird flutter out of a hole in an old stump near which they were playing in the orchard. They peered into the hole, and there was a nest with three little eggs.

They hurried to the house, and Aunt Clara came out to the orchard with them. They all waited at a little distance, and soon two birds appeared. One, which was grayish blue in color, flew straight into the hole in the stump. The other bird, which was a deeper blue, with a breast of reddish brown, alighted in an apple-tree near by.

"They are bluebirds," said Aunt Clara, "and we must not harm their nest or frighten them away."

The bird in the tree seemed to pay no attention to the visitors, but lifting his wings, he quavered out a clear song which sounded like "Tru-al-ly, tru-al-ly."

"How beautifully blue he is!" exclaimed Josephine.

"Yes," said their aunt. "There is an old Indian legend that the bluebird is a piece of the sky which came down to the earth to live.

When the Pilgrims came to New England they called the bluebird the blue robin, because its warblings reminded them so much of the robins in their native land. The bluebird is very friendly, and likes to live near people. There used to be many bird-houses for the bluebirds in parks and in the yards of houses, but the quarrelsome sparrows have driven most of the bluebirds away. Once when I was a girl we had a little house for the bluebirds, but the sparrows took possession of it. Then we found that by taking away the perch in front of the house the sparrows could not get in, for they had to Private Potts was not shooting very well. Out of ten shots he had only hit a target once, and then it was the wrong one. The instructor approached with wrath in his eye.

"Come, Potts," he said; "you don't seem to know how to hold a gun. Put it to your shoulder. That's right. Now point it straight at my eye. That's right. Keep it steady. Now press the trigger very gently—very gently! Go on! Hang it, man, why don't you pull the trigger?"

"Please, sir," stammered Private Potts, "it's loaded!"

Spanish Cream.—Place one and a half pints of milk in double boiler and when boiling add one-quarter of a box of gelatin. Let boil about four minutes, stirring constantly. Beat yolks of four eggs together with four tablespoons of sugar and a grain of salt. Pour the boiling mixture on this and return to double boiler, allowing it to boil four minutes or until it becomes creamy. Pour this then through a fine sieve, adding one teaspoon of vanilla. Set aside in cool place until it congeals, then add the well beaten whites of the four eggs, stirring lightly through custard. This is better made the day before it is used.

DELIVERED GOODS AT SEA

Aviator Landed Merchandise on Board Steamer

A despatch from New York says: The first piece of merchandise ever delivered at sea by aeroplane fell on the upper deck of the giant White Star liner Olympic on Wednesday as she steamed through the Narrows, outward bound on her maiden eastward passage.

W. Atlee Burpee, of Philadelphia, had contracted for delivery before sailing with a New York and Philadelphia department store, which in turn engaged the services flight to meet her in the Narrows, and set his course over land and sea.

Even from the pier end, passengers on the Olympic are no more than animated dots of white and black to those on shore. Presently there was to be seen among those dots a scurrying to and fro, as bits of paper blown by the wind. Sopwith had been sighted bearing down on them from aloft. Working nearer and nearer, he circled the ship as low as he dared, hovering

But it he goes out or his own country, or has to attend any great State ceremony his moustache stands out at right angles to his face, and is delightfully waxed at the points.

King Alfonso of Spain is hard at work just now raising a moustache, but to all appearances he finds the work none too easy. Still, there is no saying what the future may do, and we may yet see him with a presentable moustache. The ex-King of Portugal, too, is very bare-faced, but, unlike Alfonso, he does not seem to have tried any cultivation or a lip ornamentation.

WHAT THE SULTAN WEARS.

The Sultan of Turkey has a beard although you will not see a portrait of him with a beard on show. He had only a moustache when he came to the throne at the abdication of Abdul Hamid, the former Sultan.

Had the present Sultan worn a beard in the palmy days of Abdul Hamid he would certainly not have been reigning to-day, as it is not etiquette for a Moslem prince to wear a beard.

He may wear a moustache if he likes, but never a beard, and had old Abdul Hamid seen any prince wearing a beard, and so breaking the laws of strict etiquette—well, the Bosphorus was always handy, and anyone who offended Abdul was dipped into the water, but unfortunately no one took the trouble to fish the offending party out again.

The point lies in this—if a Moslem prince wears a beard he will at once be suspected of having designs on the throne, and to be so suspected is not healthy in Turkey.

And once a Sultan has grown a beard, it never comes off. It would be infra dig. for a Sultan to shave himself, of course, and most decidedly no Sultan would trust himself to a Turkish barber, as that would perhaps amount to a case of deliberate and intentional suicide.

WIELDED AXE ON HUSBAND.

Ottawa Magistrate Justified this Wifely Act.

A despatch from Ottawa says: According to Magistrate O'Keefe, on Wednesday morning, Mrs. A. Paquette was quite justified in using the axe on her husband last week to defend herself, but he did not believe in using an axe unless in extreme cases.

The magistrate let the accused go on suspended sentence. He warned her that an axe was a formidable weapon to use except in cases of extreme emergency. The bench, however, considered that the prisoner was goaded to use the axe and had done so without intent to kill.

Paquette, arraigned on a charge of drunkenness, was also released in view of his punishment with the axe.

FINE VACATION GIFT.

Western Woman Presents Husband With Triplets at Ottawa.

A despatch from Ottawa says: Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Hardy, of Qu'Appelle, Saskatchewan, will not forget their Ottawa visit. They are here, the guests of friends, and on Wednesday morning Mrs. Hardy gave birth to triplets, a girl, weighing  $7\frac{1}{4}$  pounds, and two boys each weighing  $6\frac{1}{2}$  pounds. They and the mother are doing well. The mother is 32 years old, and has four other children.

birds in parks and in the yards of houses, but the quarrelsome sparrows have driven most of the bluebirds away. Once when I was a girl we had a little house for the bluebirds, but the sparrows took possession of it. Then we found that by taking away the perch in front of the house the sparrows could not get in, for they had to alight before entering the small door. But the bluebirds could fly directly inside, and so they kept their home, and the sparrows had to go away."

All this made Josephine and Robert feel that they knew the bluebirds pretty well, and they hurried back to the house to get some crumbs to scatter round the old stump. And day by day they watched the pair of bluebirds and their nest, until the three baby birds, spotted with white, came out of the little shells, and grew big enough to fly among the orchard trees.—Youth's Companion.

$3,600 in Cash Prizes for Farmers

ARE you going to build that new horseblock, sidewalk or dairy house of cement? Then insist on your dealer supplying you with the "CANADA" Cement. Not only will this ensure your getting a pure, uniform and strictly high-grade cement, that will guarantee the lifelong permanency of the thing you build, but it will also entitle you to enter our Prize Contest. And in this contest you stand a good chance of winning a prize that will perhaps more than pay you for the cost of the work. Every farmer in Canada who uses "CANADA" Cement is eligible to compete. Four prizes will be awarded in each Province and these prizes will be divided as follows:

PRIZE "A"—$100.00 to be given to the farmer in each Province who will use during 1911 the greatest number of barrels of "CANADA" Cement.
PRIZE "B"—$100.00 to be given to the farmer in each Province who uses "CANADA" Cement on his farm in 1911 for the greatest number of purposes.
PRIZE "C"—$100.00 to be given to the farmer in each Province who submits us with the photograph showing the best of any particular kind of work done on his farm during 1911 with "CANADA" Cement.
PRIZE "D"—$100.00 to be given to the farmer in each Province who submits the best and most complete description of how any particular piece of work shown by photograph sent in, was done.

Notice how we have purposely planned and imposed certain necessary conditions in order to give large and small users of cement an equal opportunity.

As an illustration of this: In prizes "C" and "D," the quantity of cement used has no bearing whatever on the result. The farmer who sends us the best photograph of a small thing as a watering trough or a post, has as much chance for prize "C" as a man who sends a photograph of a house—and the same applies to prize "D."

Don't hold back from entering because you think you don't know anything about concrete work. It's very simple. Besides, we have a 160-page book that we will send you free on request, which tells you all about concrete and how to make and use it. In this book you'll find complete instructions for the making of almost everything you can think of in the way of farm utilities, floors, vats, troughs, stairs, posts, etc.

This free book—entitled "What the Farmer Can Do With Concrete"—will not only inform you—it will also greatly interest you. So send for it anyway, whether you intend to try for one of the prizes or not.

A HUNGRY PYTHON.

The First Course of His Meal Got Him into Serious Trouble.

In my travels I visited the jail at Thayet-Myo, in Burma. On the morning of my visit there had undoubtedly been an unusual occurrence. A python twenty-two feet long and twenty-eight inches in girth had entered the vegetable garden and crossed it to the fowl pen. Besides the fowls, there were some five ducks in the pen. Now, the front of the pen was fenced with diamond mesh galvanized wire netting of a strong type.

The snake could not resist a fat duck, so, putting its head and neck through the stout diamond frame, it seized and swallowed one. I have no doubt whatever that it would have "mopped up the bunch" inside the house, but that in adjusting No. 1 to make room for No. 2 it became aware of an uneasy feeling owing to the wire around its waist. Neither have I any doubt that in addition to becoming uneasy it became seriously alarmed.

Being now unable either to disgorge or to get away, it tore off the whole section of netting, 6 feet by 8, and returned with the necklace or waistband through the cabbages. Not unnaturally, I think, the sentry, seeing a 6 by 8 foot wire section of fencing marching through the cabbage patch without any visible means of support, gave the alarm and then opened fire.

The prison guard rushed out and also opened fire, and very shortly our hero lay dead in his frame. He was skinned and his skin cured and dressed in the jail, where they are noted for this kind of work.—Forest and Stream.

Applied Science.

When James Russell Lowell was minister to England he was guest at a banquet at which one of the speakers was Sir Frederick Bramwell. Sir Frederick was to respond to the toast "Applied Science." It was long after midnight when the toast was proposed, and several speakers were still to be called. Rising in his place, the scientist said:

"At this hour of the night, or, rather, of the morning, my only interest in applied science is to apply the tip of the match to the side of the box upon which alone it ignites and to apply the flame so obtained to the wick of a bedroom candle."

A moment later Lowell tossed a paper across the table to him bearing these two lines:

Oh, brief Sir Frederick, would that all could catch
Your happy talent and supply your match!

Easy Enough.

Just before the capture of Savannah General Logan, with two or three of his staff, entered the depot at Chicago to take the cars east on his way to rejoin his command. The general, being a short distance in advance of the others, stepped on the steps of a car, but was stopped by an Irishman with:

"Ye go in there."

"Why not?" asked the general.

"Because them's a ledgies' caer, and no gentleman'll be goin' in there without a ledgy. There's wan sate in that caer over there if yeas want it."

"Yes," replied the general, "I see there is one seat, but what shall I do with my staff?"

"Oh, yer staff!" was the reply. "Go take the sate and stick yer staff out of the windy."

One Opposition member of the Saskatchewan Legislature now says he is sorry he voted for the reciprocity resolution with Mr. Haultain and his fellow-Conservative members. He will have another regret coming after a while.

Calgary Albertan (Liberal.)

Every person should turn out and hear Mr. Borden discuss reciprocity. It may be that Mr. Borden will discuss other subjects, but the reciprocity is what interests us most of all. We shall get the strongest there is against the pact at this meeting.

Have you noticed that the anti-reciprocity journals are not now referring so frequently to the price of cheese on the American side? The secret of this sudden silence is that cheese is now worth a cent a pound more wholesale in New York than it is in Montreal.

The proceedings of the Conference only went to show that the various States comprising the British Empire have virtually nothing in common, and that, on the other hand, jealousies and suspicions are more formidable than those which would be manifested in the case of foreign nations desiring to enter into alliance.

Halifax Chronicle

There is just this to be said about the argument put forward by the Oppositionists, to the effect that Great Britain offers a better market than the United States for the products of Canada. If so, Canadians will send their products to Britain. The reciprocity arrangement cannot prevent them from selling in the best market. Instead of two markets they will have the choice of three. Think it over.

Toryism is allied with jingoism, and both have a desperate penchant for sensationalism. Not very long ago the Liberal Governments of Great Britain and Canada were accused of criminal indifference in the face of the imminent menace of a German attack on the Empire. Now both Governments are accused of conspiring with President Taft to break up the Empire and deliver Canada to the United States. Such puerile tactics would indicate that the Conservative parties in England and Canada are in their dotage.

PERILS THEY HAVE TO FACE.

The Awful Pressure of Water and Air That May Bury or Burst Them—The Helmet Telephone a Wonderful Aid in Work and in Times of Danger.

It is surprising to learn how many uses there are for divers. The navy, of course, employs many to set submarine mines and torpedoes and to attend to investigations of the condition of ships' bottoms. Bridge construction companies use them, as do those who build dams, waterworks and reservoirs. Waterworks in large-cities keep a diver on their staff constantly. Wrecking companies need their services, and the profession of underdriv tunneling makes many demands on the time and skill of the man in armor.

Since Smeaton in 1779 designed a pump to supply air to the diving bell little real improvement in the art has been made, save in detail of helmet and clothes, until the invention of the telephone. The greatest advance ever made in the art, divers will tell you, is the combination of the telephone with the diving suit. Before its advent divers had to depend entirely upon calls on the life line for communication with the surface and upon signs to each other when under water if two wished to communicate. Today the modern diving helmet is equipped with a telephone, and the diver can not only hear what is said to him from the surface, advise those in charge of his pump as to whether the air is "coming right" or not, but he can communicate to a brother diver and hear the instructions sent to him from the surface, all of which facilities are of great assistance in the work.

At first thought it may not seem so difficult a thing, this going down under water and breathing air sent in from a pump by a tube. But the physical drawbacks to the work are enormous.

For every ten feet a diver descends he sustains an additional pressure of four and a half pounds over every square inch of his body. What this means may be better understood when considering the greatest depth ever made by a diver—204 feet. His body at that depth sustained a pressure of eighty-eight and a half pounds to the square inch over and above the fifteen pounds always sustained when in the air.

Divers must descend very slowly, swallowing as they go; otherwise they may bleed at the nose and ears and even lose consciousness. And they must ascend even more slowly than they descend, particularly when coming from great depths; otherwise they may literally burst from internal air pressure. At the least, too sudden a rise may cause an attack of that terrible disease known to tunnel workers as caisson disease, or the bends, in which air gets into the tissues under pressure and causes the most extreme torture.

The diver, getting ready to descend, clothes himself in very heavy underwear of guernsey or flannel, the drawers well secured to prevent slipping, and adds a pair of heavy woolen socks.

If the water be cold two such suits may be worn. If the depth to be negotiated is great cotton soaked with oil is put in the ears or a heavy woolen cap pulled down over them. Shoulder pads, if worn to take the weight off the helmet, are next tied on after

The people themselves will have to decide between the Laurier Government's definite offer of reciprocity and indefinite stand on Government operation of the Hudson's Bay Railway, and Mr. Borden's absolute refusal of reciprocity and definite stand for Government operation. The parties stand thus: Liberals—For 1, in doubt 1 : Conservatives—For 1, against 1. And who is there will not say that the advantages of reciprocity which Laurier grants and Borden absolutely refuses, are not many times greater than the likely benefits of Government operation of the Hudson's Bay Railway, in regard to which Laurier has as yet declined to commit himself, but which Borden favors?

For a few days he has been engaged speaking in several places in Quebec Province, and has given very illuminating reasons for the venom shown by one Henri Bourassa. He has shown that Mr. Bourassa is a disappointed office-seeker hence his antipathy to Sir Wilfrid Laurier. The Nationalist leader first asked for a place in the Cabinet, for which he was not qualified; next he set covetous eyes on the Deputy Speakership, and, not coralling it, he turned his attention to the office of Postmaster of Montreal. He failed in all his requests, and after a threat took up his present position. The people will appraise him at his true worth.

If the water be cold two such suits may be worn. If the depth to be negotiated is great cotton soaked with oil is put in the ears or a heavy woolen cap pulled down over them. Shoulder pads, if worn to take the weight off the helmet, are next tied on, after which the diver wriggles into his heavy suit of rubber and canvas. Next come the inner collar and the breast-plate, which are secured with clamps to the rubber dress, the utmost care being taken in this operation not to tear or pinch the rubber. Finally the shoes are fitted on and the rubber gloves clamped to rings in the sleeves.

The helmet is the last to go on, and never before the valves and telephone have been tested. The attendants start to pump as the helmet is clamped home. The helmet is attached to the pump with a rubber tube, which is canvas and wire protected. No diver descends, after the helmet is put on, until he has tested the outfit and found that his air supply is sufficient and the pump working properly.

He is supplied with a life line, with which he can signal should his telephone get out of order and by which he may be drawn to the surface should he become helpless for any reason. He must take great care when walking about on the bottom not to foul his life line or his air tube and for this reason must always retrace his steps exactly to his starting point if he has gone into a wreck or about any obstructions. For the same reason two divers working together must be careful not to cross each other's path.

Sometimes the life line may become so entangled in wreckage that it must be cut, and then there is danger of the diver not finding his way back to his boat or float, especially if the bottom is muddy and fouls the "seeling." But the greatest danger of all, of course, is that the tube be cut or the diver faint. In either case he is in desperate straits. If the man handling the life line "feels" anything wrong he will haul the diver up willy nilly and regardless of the severe bleeding at nose and ears which will result from too rapid a rise to the surface. But if the diver be inside a wreck or if his life line gets tangled in wreckage such handling would do no good. It is in situations like these that the slender connecting link of telephone wire means so much to the men who risk their lives far beneath the surface of the water.—Scientific American.

What He Did on the Outside.

Bob, the man of all work in an up-town laundry, was shuffling through the office yesterday when the manager, wondering how Bob managed to live on $3 a week, said:

"Bob, what do you do on the outside to earn a living?"

"I'm de manager ob a laund'y, sah, an' I makes a right comf'rble livin', sah."

The manager looked surprised. "What's the name of your laundry, Bob?" he asked.

"Hannah Maria Johnson, sah."

The Opal.

The superstition against the opal began through the stonecutters, each of whom would anxiously ask every other if he had had any luck in his cutting, for the opal contains 13 per cent. water and is exceedingly brittle and therefore difficult to cut successfully.

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

It is Not in The Blood.
Medicine Taken Internally Can not Cure Eczema. It is Caused by Germs.

Eczema cannot be overcome by ordinary treatment and the old fashioned way of dosing the system with drugs. Eczema is caused by a parasitic germ that bores into the skin. It is generally a contagious disease. Until the parasite is completely destroyed and removed, eczema cannot be cured. Fully one-third of skin diseases are in the form of eczema.

We so thoroughly believe that Rexall Eczema Ointment will overcome eczema and all skin ailments, that we unhesitatingly promise to promptly return the money paid us for it should it in any way be unsatisfactory to the user.

Because of its remarkable cleansing antiseptic, germicidal, soothing and healing influence, Rexall Eczema Ointment has a very pronounced value in the treatment of skin diseases, especially where the form of ailment is of the chronic, aggravating sort. We highly recommend it for the dry scaly form or the weeping type, where there is a constant flow of ill-smelling excretion.

Rexall Eczema Ointment is very prompt in relieving pimples, blisters, skin dis-colorations, ringworm, acne, nettle rash, tetter, hives, ulcers, insect bites, and for healing sores and wounds. It is a pleasant smelling, grayish-white ointment and is very

DYNAMITE.

It Raised Ructions Before Nobel Learned to Control It.

Dynamite is a Greek word for powder. Its chemical name is nitroglycerin. It was discovered in a laboratory in Paris by A. Sobrero in 1847. Sobrero escaped death a hundred times by the closest margin and was never able to learn how to handle the explosive with any safety.

About 1855 Alfred Nobel, a Swedish engineer, learned how to explode the liquid by detonation. Nobel Bros. of Hamburg that year sent a young man to America to introduce its use to miners. He met with no success, and a tin can of the liquid left by him in a New York hotel when thrown into the street wrecked the hotel, injuring many and causing the neighborhood to rain glass.

It was known commercially at this stage as "gigion" and blew up by accident a West Indies packet at Colon, killing fifty people and destroying property worth a million dollars. Then its use was prohibited by law. It will burn at certain temperatures if the quantity is small. When exploded it instantly expands 10,000 times; the gases require 10,000 times the space of the liquid.

At last Nobel learned to soothe and quiet the liquid by causing it to be absorbed in fusorial earth. It was this preparation that in 1866 was sold dynamite by Nobel. When it exploded

How It Got There.

A gamekeeper was going over his master's estate one morning, when he encountered a gentleman of the poaching class. The gamekeeper noticed that the other's hat was bulging in a curious manner. After subjecting the hat to an examination he found a fine young pheasant.

"How did this get here?" the gamekeeper asked, glaring at the culprit.

"Blowed if I know," growled the poacher, gazing at the pheasant with an apparent look of great perplexity. "The blooming thing must have crawled up my trousers leg." —London Tit-Bits.

UNWRITTEN BOOKS.

Stories Planned and Promised That Never Saw the Light.

The Bookman republishes a paper by Professor Brander Matthews entitled "Unwritten Books" that was first printed many years ago. Professor Matthews speaks of the projected books and plays that never saw the light and have been read, like bills in congress, by title only.

Moliere planned a comedy under the title "L'Homme de Cour," which was to be his masterpiece. Nothing is known of it today. Richard Brinsley Sheridan intended to write a follower to "The School For Scandal" and "The Rivals." The subject was "Affection." It never went beyond a few random notes.

For years the paper covers of every new book that Victor Hugo issued continued to announce as soon to be published a romance entitled "La Quanquengrogne." Many posthumous volumes of the French poet's writing in prose and verse have been sent forth by his literary executors, but of this oddly entitled fiction nothing has been heard. In 1822 Alphonse Daudet announced as in press a volume of short stories to be called "La Pentameron." The book remained unpublished and apparently unwritten. The younger Dumas has left on record more than one reference to a comedy to be called "La Route de Thebes," planned before "Francillon," but never given to the public.

Roasting an Egg.

Every boy and girl down on the farm in times gone by used to roast eggs, pieces of meat and potatoes in embers in the old wood cook stove or in the big open fireplace. Barns were searched for hens' nests, and the fine, fresh eggs were wrapped in heavy paper. The paper was dampened, and several thicknesses of it protected the eggs from scorching. You know, wet paper in a ball is hard to burn. Well, the wrapped up eggs were put on the live coals and partially covered by them. In from five to fifteen minutes the egg was roasting hot and ready to eat with salt, pepper and butter. A pin hole was made in the big end of the egg so as to let the steam escape to keep it from bursting the shell and the meats from running out. If you have never as a small boy roasted such eggs you have missed one of childhood's greatest joys.—New York Press.

A Wonderful Painting.

In the Wiertz gallery in Brussels is a wonderful painting, dating from the time of Waterloo, called "Napoleon in Hell." It represents the great marshal with folded arms and face unmoved descending slowly to the land of the shades. Before him, filling all the background of the picture with every expression of countenance, are the men sent before him by the unbridled ambition of Napoleon. Three millions and seventy thousand there were in all—so history tells us—more than half of them Frenchmen. They are not all shown in the picture. They are only hinted at. And behind the millions shown or hinted at are the millions on millions of men who might have been and are not—the huge widening wedge of the possible descendants of the men who fell in battle.

At last Nobel learned to soothe and quiet the liquid by causing it to be absorbed in infusorial earth. It was this preparation that in 1866 was called dynamite by Nobel. When it explodes the force plunges first downward and then rebounds upward. Unless contained it has little tendency to lateral pressure. This is one of its great peculiarities.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

"CROSSING THE BAR."

"It Came in a Moment," Said Tennyson of His Great Song.

Parallel to the thoughts on immortality and the hereafter as Dr. Lowry expressed them is Lord Alfred Tennyson's noble death song, "Crossing the Bar." One of the three greatest death songs ever written, it comes to us as a sublime prayer, a humble petition, a sacred belief of a great man.

It was while crossing the Solent with his son Hallam late one October's afternoon that the words came to the mind of the poet, who had just recovered from a siege of sickness. Reaching his home, he at once sat down and penned the lines. Showing the poem to his son, he declared, "It came in a moment." Three years after the birth of the lines Sir Alfred passed away, but the prayer he uttered on that memorable afternoon remains a fitting memorial not only to the English poet laureate, but to the memory of those who have gone before us and who helped to lay the foundation of our liberal faith and liberal education. In it are blended the unfaltering trust and belief of all humanity.

The last lone man on this terrestrial sphere will utter no grander words when he sets sail to seas unknown than those dropped as faith's anchor by the silent man of the yester age:

I hope to see my Pilot face to face
When I have crossed the bar.

— "Songs Inspired by Sorrow," George Leon Varney, in National Magazine.

FOOTBALL IS DANGEROUS.

If You Don't Think So Try to Start a Game in Turkey.

It is, or was until recently, a difficult matter to be a sportsman in Turkey. One Rechad Bey tried it, with a result weird enough to serve as a basis for a detective story or a comic opera.

The young Turk had organized a football team among his friends, together with some Greeks and Armenians, and began practicing. Not very long after, in the middle of the night, police came to his house and carried him off to Scutari. There he was submitted to a long interrogation as to the club and the game of football.

The authorities were convinced that they had found a great plot and that the club must be a secret society. A special messenger was sent for the ball, and that was duly examined and found to be an infernal machine. The rules of the game were considered to be another piece of damning evidence, and still worse were the sweaters and colors of the club.

After long deliberation the culprit was sent to the higher police authorities in Stamboul, who went through a second long examination and came to the conclusion that the empire had been saved from disintegration by the early discovery of a great plot. They dispatched the whole matter to be inquired into at the sultan's palace at Yildiz, and a special commission took the matter in hand.

After much careful thought and examination of the evidence of the crime it was decided that there might not be nothing in it, but that it must not be committed again.—Harper's Weekly.

AFTER DOCTORS FAILED

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegeta- ble Compound Cured Her.

Midgie Station, N. B.—One can hardly believe this as it is not natural, but it was my case. For ten months I suffered from suppression. I had different doctors, tried different medicines, but none helped me. My friends told me I would go into a decline. One day a lady friend told me what your medicine had done for her, so I wrote you for advice and received your reply with pleasure.

I started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and at the second bottle showed improvement. Now I am regular and never was so well in my life, thanks to Mrs. Pinkham's medicine.

Please publish my letter for the benefit of others.—MRS. JOSIAH W. HICKS, Midgie Station, N. B.

Indian Head, Sask.—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is indeed a boon to women who suffer from female ills. My health is better now than it has been in my five years of married life and I thank you for the good your advice and medicine have done me. I had spent hundreds of dollars on doctors without receiving any benefit.—MRS. FRANK COOPER, Box 448, Indian Head, Saskatchewan.

The most successful remedy in this country for the cure of all forms of female complaints is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

The Just Judge.

Two women came before a certain magistrate with a fat pullet, each declaring that it belonged to herself. The magistrate from his high seat frowned heavily. "Does this pullet belong to Mrs. Jones?" he asked Mrs. Smith. "No, indeed, it don't sir," she replied. Then he turned to Mrs. Jones. "Does this pullet belong to Mrs. Smith?" "It certainly does not," she replied. "The pullet," the magistrate then decreed, "does not belong to Mrs. Jones, nor does it belong to Mrs. Smith. The pullet is mine. Take it round to the house and give it to my cook."

Using Up Sandwiches.

After a party there are sometimes many sandwiches left over which may be used up in this manner. Dip each sandwich into a rather thick batter and fry it till they are golden brown, in fat from which a bluish smoke is rising. They should be served piled up on a lace paper and garnished with parsley, and in such a form will make a delicious breakfast or luncheon dish.

WOOD PULP PAPER.

Forced Into Use by the Scarcity of Rag Stock.

In the early days of printing it was hardly possible to employ anything but first class paper in making books, for the reason that wood fiber and wood pulp paper had not then come into use. At that time good cotton and linen rags were turned into fine, firm, pure white paper, well able to withstand indefinitely the yellowing and disintegrating effects of time.

As the increase in the demand for printing paper grew apace it was soon found that there were not enough rags to go round. Thus wood pulp came into use.

All vegetable fiber is suitable for paper making, whether it be obtained from rags, wood, esparto grass, straw or other substances. When these fibers are torn apart they are clogged with gum, a substance that must be thoroughly dissolved and washed away by chemicals if the best results are to be obtained.

Wood pulp paper is made of finely ground wood, usually spruce, the grinding being done with a beating engine, run at high speed, and huge stones between which the wood is reduced to a kind of pulp. That done, it is made up into paper without any preliminary removal of the gum or other deleterious ingredients.—Harper's Weekly.

ELECTRIC FOGHORNS.

Which May Be Blown Without Effort by Pressing a Push Button.

The time honored foghorn and still the one in most common use on myriads of smaller boats is of the sort that you raise to your lips and blow. Tolerably hard work blowing a foghorn.

Bigger foghorns for larger boats are set in a box, the box containing a bellows by which the horn is blown. Attached to the bellows is an outside lever by means of which the bellows is operated by hand. A lot of noise this foghorn makes, to be heard for a considerable distance.

There are now made, used on many power boats and yachts, electric foghorns the operating of which calls for the exercise of neither lung nor hand power. In these horns there is attached, inclosed at the smaller end, a metallic diaphragm to which is connected an electric coil which when electricity is turned into it vibrates the diaphragm and sounds the horn. Electricity is supplied from a storage battery or from current generated on the boat if it is electrically equipped. To blow an electric foghorn you simply press a button.—New York Sun.

The Feast of Nature.

The Feast of Nature was a grand French revolutionary holiday, held Aug. 10, 1793. A plaster image of Nature was erected in the Place de la Bastille, and the chief members of the convention, public committees and public functionaries knelt in adoration, after which came firing of salutes, dancing and general rejoicing. The holiday celebrated the finished constitution of the republic.

A DOUBLE CURE FOR DOUBLE TROUBLE

Father Morrissey's No. 26 Cures Catarrh by a Combined Treatment.

The sudden weather variations in our climate result in a great many cases of catarrh—a troublesome disease usually considered hard to cure, and one which often leads to serious pulmonary and intestinal troubles.

A neglected cold in the head weakens the nasal membranes, so that at every future exposure the trouble returns. At length these conditions are fastened onto the system, and the sufferer undergoes the annoyance and danger of chronic catarrh.

Some doctors confine themselves to prescribing external applications, and thus do not reach the seat of the trouble. Others give internal treatment exclusively, and thus do not promptly relieve the affected parts.

Father Morrissey, the skilled physician, rightly regarded catarrh as a double trouble, consisting of unpleasant local effects and their fundamental causes, the latter having to do with impaired general vitality.

His famous remedy, No. 26, is a combined cure for catarrh. It consists of tablets to be taken three times a day, and an especially compounded salve.

The salve is antiseptic, and quickly heals the inflamed membranes of the nasal passages. The tablets go to the seat of the trouble and restore the system to its usual tone. Together, they cure.

Instead of neglecting a disease that is unpleasant to yourself and to others, and one which often leads to pneumonia and consumption, it is surely the part of wisdom to take timely steps to do away with the effects and at the same time remove the cause. No. 26 does just that.

CARRIER PIGEONS.

Homing Birds Whose Messenger Service Has Proved of Great Value.

For centuries good and bad news, prayers for help, secrets of state and tidings of war's victories and defeats have been sent under pigeons' wings. Egyptian records show that they were used in the land of the Pharaohs 13 centuries before Christ. Ovid tells that they carried the news of the Olympian games to the distant friends and relatives of the victors.

First-class carrier pigeons are very expensive, some breeding birds costing as much as $300, and they can attain the remarkable speed of nearly 1,500 yards a minute.

During the Franco-German war pigeons proved their utility as Government letter carriers. When Paris was invested by the enemy and all the ordinary channels of communication with the outside world were cut off the attention of the authorities was directed to the fact that the carrier pigeons in the city could be brought into service. At first the suggestion was ridiculed, but the practicability of the plan was soon demonstrated and in a very short time birds were conveying news into and out of the besieged city almost hourly.

During the South African war, when Sir George White was besieged at Ladysmith, a few pigeons belonging to English fanciers which had been taken into the town before the siege proved of inestimable value to the gallant commander in conveying messages to the base at Durban.

The organization of pigeon posts for military purposes in Germany is of an extremely practical character. In addition to the various Governmental posts in the fortresses and at important strategic points most of the Loring clubs place their birds in case of need at the disposition of the state, and in return for this the same pre-

The Riddle of a Wedding.

The Story of a Series of Mystifying Events That Are Brought to a Happy Solution.

By HOWARD FIELDING.

Copyright, 1907, by C. W. Hooke.

In order to appreciate the strange and harrowing riddle which Mr. John Bergen was compelled to guess one must know some simple facts about the gentleman himself. He was a lawyer of Dayton, O., and in a good way of practice, with a considerable income besides; a bachelor, in his thirtieth year.

He had come to New York on a case, and it dragged obstinately, but as every day was a hundred dollars in his pocket and the office at home was running along nicely in charge of a salaried assistant, commonly supposed to be a partner, he felt fairly well content, although he was not fond of New York as a place of residence.

His abiding place was a small hotel, relatively quiet in the metropolitan pandemonium, but insufferably dull. Bergen was bored to extinction by the life he led there, and then it changed, and all the world was bright.

For there came a girl with the most alluring brown eyes and lips that moved with magic when she spoke, so that to watch them was to behold the beauty of an angel's voice transmuted into something visible. The girl was Mildred Styvesant of Columbus, O., and she was chaperoned by a plump and silly aunt, a Mrs. Haven, also of Columbus. But beyond the meager fact of their residence they disclosed very little else to Bergen, who by superhuman tact had succeeded in making their acquaintance. Every minute

"I am here upon unpleasant business." plunged him deeper into the perilous mysteries of love, yet outwardly he progressed not one inch toward the goal of the lady's favor.

Matters were in this state when one evening as Bergen was about to enter the dining room he was accosted by the manager of the hotel, who told him addition to the various Government lofts in the fortresses and at important strategic points most of the Loming clubs place their birds in case of need at the disposition of the state, and in return for this the same protection is afforded to their pigeons as to those which are the property of the Government. They bear an official mark and it is a criminal offence to trap or shoot them or to detain them should they stray into private loft.

A Manchester firm of millowners is reported to be possessed of a pigeon which has been employed as a messenger from one mill to another for over 10 years. During that period it has made over 2,000 journeys and traveled over 20,000 miles. It is calculated that to have sent the messages by wire would have cost $1,500.

Homing pigeons are not only endowed with marvelous speed, but with great endurance. A few years ago a bird belonging to the late King Edward, who was a great pigeon enthusiast, as is King George, won the national race from Lerwick, covering 510 miles at a velocity of 1,307 yards a minute.

Von Weber's Last Portrait.

A strange memorial of a famous man was among the possessions of George Augustus Sala. He tells of it in "My Life and Adventures":

My mother prior to her widowhood had known Von Weber during his visit to London in 1826. He was a frequent visitor to our house in New street, and I have a water color drawing of the illustrious German composer in a gray dressing gown sitting in a large pink and white striped covered fauteuil, his head sunk on his breast and looking desperately ill. Beneath is the inscription, "Alas, poor Karl Maria!" The great musician died, indeed, in London of consumption on the 5th of June in the year named.

His Summer Voice.

In an English opera company, formed for the summer months, it was found that the tenors were too light for the rest of the chorus. The manager protested that there were voices enough, and the leading tenor was questioned why he did not sing with more force. His answer to the remonstrances of the manager was, "I am paid summer wages, and I refuse to sing in anything but my summer voice." The engagement of the tenor and his summer voice came to a speedy termination.

Overheard at the Party.

"Don't say anything to make Mrs. Leeder laugh. Her enamel's cracking."

"The man who just came in? He's Mrs. Muldrum's second husband. I've forgotten his name."

"You never know whom you're going to bump against when you come to a place like this."

"Watch out—here she comes. Yes, indeed, Mrs. Gwimp, we're enjoying ourselves greatly."

Often a Long Time.

Nellie was out riding one day with her grandmother in the country. As they passed a village cemetery she looked up at the old lady and asked, "Grandma, how long is it after they plant people before their tombstones come up?"

Blissful Ignorance.

"Were you nervous when you proposed to your wife?" asked the sentimental person.

"No," replied Mr. Meekton, "but if I could have foreseen the next ten years I would have been."

Unusual.

"They're very unusual people," said the musician.

"Is that so?"

"Yes; they invited me to dinner, and then they didn't ask me to spend the evening playing for them."

progressed not one inch toward the goal of the lady's favor.

Matters were in this state when one evening as Bergen was about to enter the dining room he was accosted by the manager of the hotel, who told him that there was a gentleman who wished to meet him.

"He comes from Columbus," said the manager, "and, happening to hear that you were from Dayton"—

"All right," said Bergen. "Where is he?"

The magic word Columbus had destroyed his natural disinclination to meet strangers—not that he had any notion of gaining information from this person, but simply that he was strongly prejudiced in favor of anybody hailing from that city. Presently, therefore, he was introduced to a careworn man of forty clothed all in black, though not in the customary raiment for informal dining. His name was Marsh.

"I know you, Mr. Bergen," said he sadly. "You're a lawyer—that's what you are, and a good one. And I may need your advice before this evening's over—an Ohio man, too, and that's what I'm likely to want."

"At your service, Mr. Marsh," responded Bergen, entertained by a certain quality of mystery in this man. "Shall we go in to dinner together?"

Marsh's face brightened as when some random gleam in a dull day shines on a neglected tomb.

"Why, that would suit me to death," said he.

There was no further reference to the trouble which he might wish to lay before an Ohio lawyer. When they were seated he began to speak of the guests scattered about the room, and his somber comments were delightful for simplicity and wit.

"I like to size people up," he said. "Now, for instance, there's a couple just coming in—what I'd call an interesting pair on a first glance. Let's sort o' watch 'em and see what we can make out."

"I have met the lady," said Bergen. "But not the man?"

Bergen shook his head, his lips so tightly compressed that he could not open them to speak.

"Is he her husband, do you think?" queried Marsh.

"Her husband?" echoed Bergen, aghast. "Why, no. She is Miss Stuyvesant of Columbus."

"I thought they looked married," said Marsh in his saddest tone.

"I know what you've done," said Marsh. "But if you're married to Stuyvesant's daughter your grandfather's going to let up on you. You've got to prove that marriage, and you've got to do it now or I'll take you in. Here's Mr. Bergen, a well known New York lawyer, who will see that all's legal and right."

Probably Marsh called Bergen a New York lawyer merely for the value of the phrase. It seemed hardly worth while to correct the error, especially as Caldwell honored the distinguished counsel with a bow.

"Gentlemen," said Caldwell, "it is my wife's wish that our marriage should be secret for a time, but I will accept your solemn assurances and disclose the facts in confidence. My wife and I were married three weeks ago in Dayton. She preferred to take an assumed name because of her father's opposition. I happen to have the certificate in my trunk."

Dr. de Van's are sold at $5 a box, or three for $10. Mailed to any address. The Bebell Drug Co., St. Catharines, Ont. Or at Hooper's Drug Store.

And he produced a document which asserted that James Caldwell and Elizabeth Miller had been united in wedlock by the Rev. Hugh McKnight. The clergyman was known to Bergen. He recognized the signature as genuine, and his heart died in his bosom. March read his glance and began immediately to move toward the door. Bergen followed.

When it was over, the lawyer had no desire for the society of the mournful Marsh, from whom he presently separated, having a desire to walk. It had begun to rain, however, and Bergen halted, indecisive, on the steps of the hotel.

"Cab, sir?" said a voice, and Bergen looked into the face of the man to whom he had seen Mrs. Haven give money.

Upon the rayless gloom of Bergen's mind there fell a sudden beam, the light of an insane hope.

"My friend," said he, "where had you driven the stout lady who paid you in the hall?"

"Dr. Horton's, on Twenty-ninth street, sir."

"A doctor?"

"Minister."

"Wait for me here."

Bergen hurried into the office and requested that his name should be sent up to Mrs. Haven.

"She and her niece have gone," said the clerk.

"Gone out?"

"Gone for good."

"And Mr. Caldwell?" said Bergen.

"He's gone, too—not ten minutes ago."

Bergen ran to the door, where the cabby was waiting.

"Drive me to Dr. Horton's," said he, "and save time at the rate of a dollar a minute for yourself."

A trim maid at Dr. Horton's door said that the clergyman was engaged, but at that moment the venerable man himself appeared in the reception room.

"Sir," said Bergen, "am I right in supposing that a marriage is about to be performed between James Caldwell and Mildred Stuyvesant?"

"And suppose you are right, my young friend?" said the minister. "What then?"

"I am a lawyer from Dayton, O.," answered Bergen. "About three weeks ago in that city"—

He was interrupted by a ring at the bell, and the door was immediately opened by the maid. Mrs. Haven and Mildred were ushered in, and they were amazed at the sight of Bergen.

"Miss Stuyvesant," said he, "I am here upon most unpleasant business. I have learned of your intended marriage with Mr. Caldwell. This evening, for a reason which I will explain to you later, Mr. Caldwell showed to myself and a detective a certificate of marriage, in which document he appeared as bridegroom and Miss Elizabeth Miller as bride. Now, while I am bound to say to you that this document may have been a forgery intended to deceive the detective who would otherwise have interrupted this marriage, I think that the circumstances of the case strongly urge you to delay."

"Before proceeding further," said Dr. Horton, "I think we should join Mr. Caldwell, who is waiting in my reception room."

Thereupon he ushered them in, but Mr. Caldwell was not there. An open window explained his absence. He had overheard Bergen's statement, but had not recognized his voice. To Caldwell this "lawyer from Dayton" was a far more formidable person than the "well known New York lawyer" whom he had met at the Hotel Braithwaite.

For it proved upon investigation that

Getting the Exact Spot.

An emergency call from a policeman for tape measure kept two women waiting in the dressmaker's parlor for five minutes. There were other tape measures there which the dressmaker might have used, but she was too busy pondering the circumstance that had suddenly converted her into an ally of the police department. Presently the policeman returned the tape.

"What did you want it for?" she asked.

"To help find the right place to shoot a horse with a broken leg," he said. "The vital spot is just three inches above that little swirl in his forehead where dozen crowns seem to meet. I am not very good at guessing, so we thought it safest to find the exact spot with a tape measure."—New York Sun.

he recognized his voice. To Caldwell this "lawyer from Dayton" was a far more formidable person than the "well known New York lawyer" whom he had met at the Hotel Braithwaite.

For it proved upon investigation that the Dayton wedding was a valid ceremony and Elizabeth Miller was a real woman whom Caldwell had shamelessly jilted, but with whom he had been forced into a secret marriage by the threat of scandal. His affairs had come to such a pass that a marriage with Mildred Stuyvesant was absolutely his only hope of escaping jail. He had therefore taken the desperate step of marrying Miss Miller, trusting that he could buy her silence with the Stuyvesant gold.

When confronted by Marsh at the Hotel Braithwaite he had seen destruction staring him in the face and in the last gasp of terror had thought him of the certificate which he had stolen three weeks ago from poor Bessie Miller. The ruse had served him well, but those fatal words "a lawyer from Dayton" had shattered his dream. Any one who came from that city to stop the bigamous wedding must be armed with sufficient facts, thought Caldwell.

Rev. John Reble has returned home from Toronto, where he has been spending the fiftieth annual session of the Lutheran synod of Canada. He was accompanied by his friend and former fellow student, Rev. Mr. Stockman, of Linwood, who had promised him a visit. Both clergymen conducted a series of missionary meetings at Ruggan on Sunday before last, which were very successful and well attended. Mr. Stockman was well pleased with his visit here and regretted that his official appointments at home would not permit a longer stay.

The many friends and relatives of Mrs. Wm. Chatson were surprised and shocked to learn of her sudden and unexpected death on Thursday evening last. The deceased lady, who was highly esteemed and liked by all who knew her, died of blood-poisoning after a very brief illness. Her remains were laid to rest in the Lutheran cemetery on Saturday last, Rev. J. Reble officiating. What makes the case still sadder and more painful is the fact that her husband was away at Saskatoon and could not be present at her sudden departure and interment. He arrived home only on Monday last.

ODESSA.

On account of strike of the bricklayers and stone masons in Denmark (or some other far-away town), the workmen have been called off the job on the new Methodist church here, hence everything at a standstill and material going to waste. Is it not high time that the government took a hand and gave some of these "leaders" a job in the "pen" cutting stone for a while, and give business a chance to right itself again?

A little amusement was caused, on Sunday morning last, when the license inspector, with three assistants, swooped down on the town looking for intoxicants. After diligent search they got nearly enough to last them till they got back to Napanee. In one house they found a small flask, and took it, much to the disgust of the fond mother who wanted it to wash the new baby. In another they got two half-filled bottles of medicinal porter that was being used for sickness, and another good Samaritan presented them with a partly filled bottle (all there was left) of real good whisky, for which, no doubt, they said, "For what we are about to receive, O please make us truly thankful."

The Sunday school convention was held here last Thursday, all reports showing a prosperous year. Two speakers from a distance were T. F. Harrison, of Kingston, and Rev. Mr. Wing, of Hamilton.

OR, A LOOK INTO THE PAST

CHAPTER XVIII.

The rain clouds had vanished the next morning, and the sunshine, though it was but a faint likeness to the golden light that used to dwell in the bygone summer time, still shone bright and pleasantly over the grounds and lawn.

Darnley was up early; he had paid his visit to the sick-room, and had been rewarded for his pains by the evident delight and comfort his uncle experienced in his presence. The young man was inexpressibly shocked at the change wrought in the vigorous, florid, happy-looking Sir Humphrey; and despite his manhood, a mist of unshed tears rushed to his eyes as he gazed at the white, drawn face, with the shadow of retreating death lingering, as it were, reluctantly on it; he could not speak at first, but stood grasping the thin, trembling hand his uncle extended to him.

"This—this is a bad lookout, Derry, my lad," Sir Humphrey whispered, in his faint, weak voice. "I've had a narrow squeak, ay, a very narrow one. I thank Heaven you are here. My—my darling wants some one to look after her, and—"

His strength would go no farther.

The young man began to talk cheerily, in the nearest approach to his old frank manner he could muster up; it was a hard struggle, for it hit him very deep to see the active, healthy, gentle-natured man, who had seemed the very quintessence of vitality, lying there a cripple for life, a terrible wreck.

He said everything he could to cheer Sir Humphrey—sacrificing his own inclination, which was battling to be out in the open air, trying to solve the problem which Dorothy's words of last night had conjured up.

The sick man lay back contented, a more peaceful look on his wan countenance than had come during his short respite from pain.

"I am glad," he murmured, over and over again; and once, when Darnley bent over him, he caught the whisper; "Dolly has fretted about Nancy—you must cheer—"

When he had left the sick-room, having first inquired for Dorothy, and learned that she was sleeping soundly—a condition of things which pleased him beyond all description—the young man put on his hat, and, whistling for the dogs, who were mournful and depressed at their beloved master's illness, he sailed out into the open air.

It was a wonderfully balmy day—one of the few summer days that are sprinkled here and there in an English winter. The very first person he saw was the old head gardener, Mr. Murdock, from whom he received a warm greeting—in fact, everybody was pleased to see him again.

raced round him, delighted at the prospect of a walk, and seeing in this poor animals—a sign that better times were coming. Derrick walked on rapidly. He gave no special heed to the path he chose, but let his feet lead him involuntarily whither they would. He was soon out of the grounds into the muddy country lanes, but once there he awoke from his musings, and, with a quick movement, turned away from the village. Solitude was bad, but gossip was worse, and he could not by any chance go through Ripstone village without stopping to greet first one person and then another.

He strode along heedless of the mud. Although he had been at the Hall a great deal the earlier part of the year, he was not very conversant with the neighborhood, as his walks had been confined principally to the Hall grounds, and Sir Humphrey had been abroad so much that he had no chance of exploring the country during the hunting seasons, therefore, it was not at all surprising that, when Mr. Darnley found himself at a corner where two lanes ran diverse ways, he came to a sudden standstill and hesitated.

He stood and reconnoitred, having first ascertained that it was still early by a glance at his watch, and then determined to take the right-hand lane.

"I must have made a regular detour," he said to himself. "That mass of trees evidently belongs to the east part of Ripstone. I can get back that way."

So, suiting the action to the word, he made for the spot mentioned.

When he reached the trees, however, he came to a stop. A gate was before him, but it was chained and padlocked, with ominous iron spikes ornamenting the top rail.

The young man gave a short whistle of surprise, which deepened as his eyes rested on a board with a warning to trespassers printed on it in gigantic letters.

"This is very odd! Uncle Humphrey can know nothing of it, I am sure. One of the keepers has taken upon himself to be very cautious all at once. It's the first time I ever remember a board like that, or spikes like those ugly ones, to have a place in Ripstone property."

He rattled the gate as he muttered this; but though the chain was loose, there was no movement either backward or forward.

"This is, to say the least of it, annoying—deuced annoying!" mused Darnley, his wrath rising visibly against the imaginary keeper, who had arranged all this apparently to thwart him.

"I don't feel like retracing my steps at all. I am sure this is a near way to the Hall."

He stepped back and reviewed the gate, the dogs watching him with eager eyes and hanging tongues.

"Sir Humphrey would be simply beside himself if he knew these horrible things were scattered about. I wonder who has done it? It's not like Murdock, for with all his grumpiness, the old fellow has as soft a heart as any one I know. Perhaps Lady Merefield has been exercising her authority. This is just the sort of thing I could imagine her doing. Well, at any rate, when Dolly knows, everything will be altered in the twinkling of an eye. Now I must get on. Surely the lake must be over there."

With another tender caress for the dog, who was going very lame, the young man strode over the rank weeds and grass, keeping a sharp lookout for more traps, and making the dogs follow sharp at heel, a proceeding to which the sagacious beasts were nothing loath, since their companion had experienced such difficulty and pain.

Darnley walked on for about fifty yards, and yet the lake did not come in sight.

"It is very odd," he muttered, "I seem to be all wrong. Hallo! what's that?—looks like a woman's dress; it must be one of the maids—so much the better, she will put me on the right track. Come on, dogs!"

His steps were necessarily softened with the thickness of the herbage upon which he walked, and as he pushed through a short clump of low-growing shrubs, Mr. Darnley saw immediately that the servant maid not only was unaware of his presence, or, indeed, the presence of any one near her, but that she was evidently overcome with fatigue or grief, for she sat crouched on an old gnarled tree root, her elbows planted on her knees and her face hidden in her hands.

With the instinctive delicacy that was so pre-eminently one of his chief characteristics, deepened by the rush of sympathy that came upon him as he beheld this figure, so expressive of utter despair and desolation, Derrick Darnley turned to withdraw silently without intruding on the girl's sorrow, for he saw the figure was both young and slight; but before his thoughtful intention could be carried out, an incident occurred to prevent it altogether.

The dogs, who were not actuated by so nice a sense of delicacy, went up to the silent form, and first giving a sniff of wariness, next began to jump up and lick the small hands with short barks and cries of canine welcome and delight.

The man's heart stood still, a mist rose before his eyes, then his pulses began to throb at a rate they had never travelled before.

"Dick—Borgie—Dick, come here. Do you hear me?" he called, in a strange, husky voice.

The dogs fell back, suddenly checked in their exuberant pleasure; not so much by his command as by the involuntary shiver that ran through the girl's frame, making her start to her feet and turn her white, tear-stained face to their master.

A silence that was as deep as death lived then. What words could come at such a moment between these two? It was not weakness alone that tied Derrick Darnley's tongue, as his dark eyes gazed into Nancy's great, sad blue ones; it was a sense of fear, of honor that compelled his silence, for in that one glance he read how much he had wronged her; and that, no matter what motive had caused her to separate herself from him. In one stride he was beside her—honor, self-restraint, everything forgotten in the rush of mad, passionate love and emotion that swept over him.

"Nancy—Nancy! Oh God! don't—don't, I can't bear it—I can't bear it!"

He had her two trembling hands in his firm grasp, robbed of their shelter, Nancy bowed her head to hide her tears. Now her self-reproach, her remorse was gone, for Derry did not, could not surely hate her if he spoke like this.

For an instant they stood quietly, though the pulses of each thrilled with mingled ecstasy and misery.

"I have frightened you by my sudden appearance, dear," the man said at last, speaking in tones of the deepest tenderness and sadness. "I who would sooner cut off my right hand than give you a moment's pain. Can you forgive me, Nancy?"

Her fingers closed round his for an instant.

"Oh! don't speak like that!" she cried, brokenly. "Forgive you—you!" Then she wrenched her hands from his grasp. "Go—go at once," she whispered, eagerly, intensely; "don't ask me why—only go."

He hesitated for an instant.

"I can't go," he muttered, almost fiercely; "you ask too much of me; think of all I have endured, of all I have suffered since that summer night! Nancy, you wrecked my life then. Now that we have met, I have a right to know why you did this; why you—you who love me—yes, who love me still—you can't deny it!—why you acted as you did and married this man—this awful brute! Answer me—I will know!"

Nancy's two hands were clenched together against her heart; two fierce spots of color burned on either white cheek; she was swaying to and fro uncertainly in her agitation.

"What if I say I will not answer you?" she murmured, huskily. Then, with a sudden change, she held out one hot, trembling hand toward him. "Derry, my—my darling!—yes, my darling!—do you love me?" she asked him, with strange, unnatural calmness. Then, before his lips had time to open even, while he held her hand in an iron grip between his own: "Yes—yes, I know your answer. You are true, stanch, loyal—my brave, my hero! Then—if you love me—you will not make me suffer more—you will not stay now to question me on the past, the present or the future! You will leave me at once—when—when you know what pain your presence brings!"

Derry stood for one instant silent, motionless. He was barely conscious of what fierceness he put into the agony of the grasp that held her hand; a lump rose in his throat and nearly choked him; her pale, pathetic face, so sweet, so pure, so wholly given up to the intensity of her love for him, struck his heart with the deepest pain he had ever felt in his life.

The sudden gleam of happiness that would come when he learned that this girl was still his—his by love's powerful right—did not linger long. It was followed by a rush of despair, of anguish.

Her eager, strangely nervous appeal gave him an additional pang.

"It is very, very hard," he mutthat are sprinkled here and there in an English winter. The very first person he saw was the old head gardener, Mr. Murdock, from whom he received a warm greeting—in fact, everybody was pleased to see him again.

"Eh, but it's Miss Dorothy will be right glad, sir," he said. "We were just at our wits' end two days sen that puir bairn's white face made our hearts bleed. And sen his lordship went she's wanted some one varry badly."

"Well, I am here now, and here I shall remain," said Derrick Darnley quickly. He shrank from hearing some unkind remark on Nancy's conduct. With this new and perplexing condition of his mind, he determined he would judge her no more till he had fathomed something of the truth.

As he moved away, followed by the dogs, his thought went to Merefield, and he wondered what could have taken the other man away from his cousin at such a crisis. It was very odd: and then his mind went back to the one all-potent subject—Nancy. He was too truly a man of honor and of delicacy to have pressed Dorothy further last night, although in the girl's shattered state a less generous-minded person might have learned all he wanted to know. In fact, he had changed the subject immediately, and Nancy's name had not been mentioned again. But Dorothy's staunch love and loyalty had awakened fresh impulses in the man's heart. It sent a pang of self-reproach through him—reproach that she should be faithful to Nancy, while he had already judged and condemned her, and it also brought pain—deep, lasting pain; and the agonizing reflection came, that were he to discover now that his love had never changed—that she was still fair, pure ideal—was there not the torture of knowing she was lost? He was so completely in the dark, he did not even know where Nancy was, what she was doing, how it fared with her. Dorothy had vouchsafed no information, if even she had any to give, and he had been too agitated to question her.

Deep in his thoughts, he strolled on and on, until he reached the end of the lane, then returned and looked at the Hall, standing surrounded with its dismantled trees waving their empty branches to and fro in the soft, mild air.

"Dolly's blind is down. Good. A long sleep is the best thing for her, poor child! I can't bear to see her face as it was last night. I feel restless. A few miles more will do me good."

He whistled to the dogs, who pricked up their ears gladly and had arranged all this apparently to thwart him.

"I don't feel like retracing my steps at all. I am sure this is a near way to the Hall."

He stepped back and reviewed the gate, the dogs watching him with eager eyes and hanging tongues, marvelling as to what he was going to do.

"Hum!" mused the young man, with much deep thought; "it's bad, certainly, but it might be worse. I think I'll have a shot! At the worst I shall only tear my clothes, and I hate to be beaten. Now to see if want of practice has destroyed my former agility!"

He retraced a few paces farther, fixed his hat on firmly, then starting at a quick, even pace, he leaped the formidable barrier as lightly as though it had been a few inches, not a five-barred gate.

There was a flush of pleasure on his face and a thrill of satisfaction in his breast.

"I said I would not be beaten," he mentally declared, as he coaxed the dogs to squeeze through the bars and join him. "It would have been awfully hard lines to have had to tramp all down that lane again; and I must get on now. Poor Dolly will wonder what has become of me."

He picked up his hat, which had fallen off in his jump, and replaced it on his dark, wavy locks.

"I'll have to go at Murdock about that gate and board, by Jove, I will!" he declared, as he turned to go through the long grass and wildwooded inclosure. "Sir Humphrey won't stand it for an instant, I am sure."

Then he whistled to the dogs and pushed on. It was strange, but he did not quite recognize his surroundings.

True, there were doubtless many portions of the Hall grounds and lands which he had not yet seen; but there was an indefinable feeling in his mind that this was not like the rest of the property.

For one thing, it was unkempt and neglected. Evidently the board to trespassers was not needed, for this spot was not inviting, even to tramps.

"If I go this way I shall reach the lake," Darnley communed with himself, as he came to one point.

The sunshine had suddenly gone, and the air felt like rain at any moment.

A shiver, born of what sensation he did not know, passed through him. He stood still, and looked round, and at that moment one of the dogs gave a sharp cry and a moan of pain; and in one glance the young man saw that the poor animal had its forepaw locked in a trap which had been hidden in the long grass.

"This is shameful!" he said, flushed with anger, as he knelt down and unfastened the cruel machine. "I shall certainly give Murdock a piece of my mind. Poor Dick!—poor Dick! It isn't so bad old fellow! You were more frightened than hurt, thank goodness! But if this infernal thing had closed as it should have done, you would have had a broken leg, old chap!"

With infinite tenderness Darnley patted and soothed the frightened animal.

It was as he said. The dog was not really much hurt, for the trap had fortunately failed to act properly; but his brow darkened as he rose from his knees.

ley's tongue, as his dark eyes gazed into Nancy's great, sad blue ones; it was a sense of fear, of honor that compelled his silence, for in that one glance he read how much he had wronged her; and that, no matter what motive had caused her to separate herself from him, she loved him with even more intensity than in their brief summer happiness.

CHAPTER XIX.

It was Nancy who spoke first.

She was leaning against the massive tree, a world of emotion and agitation expressed in her sweet face.

"What—what are you doing here?" she asks, feebly, almost inaudibly. "How did you get in?"

Derrick looked mystified, but only for an instant; his heart was beating almost to suffocation; strong man as he was, he trembled at the violence of the joy and bitterness mingled that suddenly came upon him.

"I beg your pardon for intruding. Believe me, I had no idea you were here, or I should not have come."

Nancy was breathing in short gasps, her eyes had left his and were wandering round in a nervous, hunted way, which sent an angry pang to his heart.

"You—you have startled me!" she murmured. "No one ever comes here. How did you come? Why did you come?"

There was a desperate ring of sorrow in that last question.

"I jumped the gate over there," he explained in low, eager tones. "I want to get back to the Hall, and thought this part of the grounds was a short cut. I—"

"Part of the Hall grounds," Nancy repeated, with her eyes still going about nervously, as if in search of something or some one. "You—you have made a mistake—this is not Ripstone property."

"Not Ripstone! Then where am I?"

He went a step nearer to her in his surprise.

"These are the manor grounds, and—and my home!"

Nancy's lips trembled as she uttered the words that should have been pregnant with tenderness, but which, uttered in her low, pathetic voice, carried only too truly the sad plaint of despair.

Derrick stepped back involuntarily; he was utterly surprised and overwhelmed with pained annoyance.

"I entreat you to pardon me," he said, in tones that were choked beyond recognition. "Indeed, I knew nothing of this—it is a terrible blunder to have made; but, believe me, I have blundered in ignorance. I did not know that this was the manor property. I did not know that—that you were even in the neighborhood. I can but offer my sincere apologies and depart at once."

He had half turned aside as he spoke, and, therefore, did not see her sudden gesture of despair and anguish—not the tears which welled up in her glorious eyes and blinded her so that she had to press her hand over them to relieve them; but as he waited a moment for her to answer, and found she was silent, he turned again, and then he saw that she was utterly powerless to speak, for she was weeping—weeping very silently, but more and more bitterly.

She stopped; it almost seemed as if she choked herself.

"Nancy—tell me—does—he—oh! I can't say it! You are unhappy with him. I will not ask you again to give me the reason of this marriage, the reason for ruining our love, our life! But this you must answer me—it is my right—I de-

... would come when he returned that this girl was still his—his by love's powerful right—did not linger long. It was followed by a rush of despair, of anguish.

Her eager, strangely nervous appeal gave him an additional pang.

"It is very, very hard," he muttered, when at last speech came, "to find you, to know that all these past weeks, when I have been reviling you, you have been true in your dear heart—to me!—to stand beside you and hold your hands, and yet to hear you say that I must go at once!—go! Nancy, do you understand what that means? We may never meet again—try and realize what that will mean to both of us!"

He was quivering from head to foot. The events of the last few minutes had completely and utterly unnerved him. The sudden shock of coming upon Nancy, the anguish that followed on the brief ecstasy awakened by her avowal of love, all acting on a mind already nervous and unhinged by the struggles it had undergone and endured of late, robbed him of every scrap of strength.

His face had grown paler even than the girl's wan one looking up at him. The flushed, stalwart young fellow who only a few moments before had leaped the gate so lightly and easily seemed to have no kinship with this pale, haggard creature.

The very dogs seemed to understand that something dreadful was happening, for they stood with sad, patient eyes, gazing up at those two distraught faces as though they offered silent sympathy and help.

The man's weakness gave Nancy strength.

"I know—I understand," she said, in quiet, low tones. "But even so—dearest—it yet must be done!"

"Then your words were false just now! You do not love me! You could not love me, and tell me to leave you!"

He loosened his hold on her as he spoke.

Tears welled into Nancy's blue eyes and rolled down her cheeks—those pale, wan cheeks, that were so different from the rosy ones she had owned back in the summer months.

She made a little gesture of despair—so forlorn, so full of desolation, that it struck him to the heart.

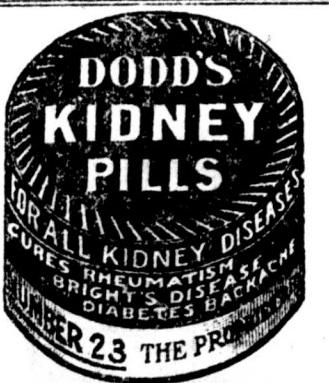

His arm went out suddenly toward her, as if to infold her and hold her to his breast; but she did not see the movement, for her head was bent, and some innate touch of purity and delicacy withheld him from his purpose.

"Forgive me, dearest one!" he said, in low, hurried tones. "I—I did not know what I was saying, Nancy! Tell me that you forgive me, dear!"

"There is no need for forgiveness between us," the girl answered, gently, choking her tears with difficulty. Then she turned to him: "But you must go. Yes—yes, for my sake, you will go! Do not make me—"

She stopped; it almost seemed as if she choked herself.

"Nancy—tell me—does—he—oh! I can't say it! You are unhappy with him. I will not ask you again to give me the reason of this marriage, the reason for ruining our love, our life! But this you must answer me—it is my right—I deed as she spoke hurriedly. "Then," she went on, feverishly—"then I wake to know that the sunshine has gone, that I have lost Dorothy, and that though she is in sore distress, I do not even go to her and offer her comfort. It is a horrible thought!" she said, with a shudder. "She has called me—yes, I have heard her voice, and yet—yet I do not move a step to help her. Oh, will God punish me for my ingratitude? Will He make me suffer more?"

STARVED NERVES

The Cause of Neuralgia—It Must be Treated Through the Blood

Neuralgia is a cry of the nerves for more and better blood. It literally means that the nerves are being starved. Like every other part of the body the nerves receive their nourishment through the blood. There is therefore no doubt that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will cure the worst cases of neuralgia.

They actually make new, rich blood, carrying to the starved nerves the elements they need, thus driving away the sharp, torturing pains which nearly drives the sufferer wild. So many cases of neuralgia have yielded to treatment through Dr. Williams' Pink Pills that every sufferer from this dreaded trouble should lose no time in giving the Pills a fair trial. Mrs. Sophia H. Johnson, Mozan, Sask., says: "For upwards of ten years I was a periodic sufferer from neuralgia. It located in the side of my face and in the jaw, which would actually click every time I opened or closed my mouth. At times the pains would be almost unendurable, and as time went on, my whole nervous system seemed to be affected. I was constantly doctoring, but the doctor did not seem to be able to give me permanent relief, and at last I decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I got a half dozen boxes, and before they were half gone I felt much better, and by the time I had used them all every symptom of the trouble had gone, and I was enjoying a comfort I had not known for years. I have since remained in the best of health, and can only say I owe the joy of living without pain to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

THE ROPE WAS FASTENED.

Pat had just come out of prison after doing six months, and had met a friend of his named Mike.

"Hello!" said Mike, "where have you been all this time?"

"Sure," said Pat, "I've been doing six months in gaol."

"And what for?" asked Mike.

"For stealing a piece of rope," said Pat.

"Stealin' a piece of rope?" said Mike in astonishment.

"But, begorra," said Pat, "there was a cow at the end of it!"

For Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator has ranked as the most effective preparation manufactured, and it always maintains its reputation.

Those of weak stomach will find strength in Parmelee's Vegetable Pills, because they serve to maintain the healthful action of the stomach and the liver, irregularities in which are most distressing. Dyspeptics are well acquainted with them and value them at their proper worth. They have afforded relief when other preparations have failed, and have effected cures in ailments of long standing where other medicines were found unavailing.

"Mr. Mills," said the spokesman of the workingmen's committee, "we have come to tell you, sir, that we want shorter hours and—'" "Very well," interrupted the busy manufacturer, "we'll begin right off with shorter dinner hours."

"Yes," replied the boy, "nine quarts and one kick."

A Cure for Rheumatism.—A painful and persistent form of rheumatism is caused by impurities in the blood, the result of defective action of the liver and kidneys. The blood becomes tainted by the introduction of uric acid, which causes much pain in the tissues and in the joints. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are known to have effected many remarkable cures, and their use is strongly recommended. A trial of them will convince anyone of their value.

Odd Things Eccentric Men Do

If it be true, as John Stuart Mill maintained, that eccentricity has always abounded when and where strength of character has abounded, and that the amount of eccentricity in a society has generally been proportional to the amount of genius, vigor and moral courage it contained, then there must have been an extraordinary amount of strength, vigor and moral courage among the inhabitants of England during the unjustly disparaged eighteenth century, for of a certainty the country then swarmed with cranks, says Chambers' Journal. This reflection has more than once occurred to me in the course of the researches which I have had to make into certain biographical backwaters of the Georgian era.

In 1729, there lived at Romford, in Essex, a well-known butcher of that town named Wilson. Mr. Wilson, it appears, was notable for his integrity in business and for the gentleness of his manners—two qualities which, perhaps, would scarcely have entitled him to the notice of posterity had he not also exhibited a remarkable addition to psalmody, extraordinary proficiency in penmanship and a high peculiar manner of eating his dinner.

Such butcher's bills as he sent to his customers had never been seen before and have never been seen since. They were all exquisitely written by his own hand; but the top line would be, perhaps, in German text, the second in Roman letters, simulating the finest print; beef would be in one style of writing, mutton in another, lamb in a third, while each of these kinds of meat would be still further distinguished by a different color of ink. He was a great friend to the church, observing all its ordinances—and a trifle more. Every Sunday he entertained the congregation with a solo, singing the psalms by himself until the minister came into the desk. And on every last fast day, while all the rest of the congregation went home to their refreshment and rest, between morning and evening service, he never quitted the church, but went about from pew to pew repeating the Lord's Prayer and singing appropriate psalms, until he had performed these favorite devotions in every pew in the church.

He had a large appetite and seemed determined that all Romford should know it; for, instead of sitting down quietly to dinner in his back parlor, he would usually sally forth into the street with a leg or shoulder of lamb in one hand, a large knife in the other, a small loaf of bread in his pocket, and a handful of salt in the bend of the arm which carried the joint, and, thus equipped, would perambulate the town, eating as he went, until he had consumed the whole of this very substantial meal.

William Lewis, Esq., of Llandisruan, who died on December 30, in the act of drinking a "tumber maun"—that is, a cup of Welsh ale containing about a wine quart—had made it a rule in his life to read a dice. After the ceremony was over the six gentlemen went back to the house, and, after a cold supper, sang the 31st ode of the first book of Horace, drank a cheerful glass and went home about 8 o'clock. "Which done," were the concluding words of this eccentric's will, "I would have them take a cheerful glass and think no more of John Underhill."

A rather less poetic eccentric was a farmer of Stevenage, in Hertfordshire, who died on February 1, 1721, and was found to have ordered by will that his estate, which was worth about $2,000 a year, should be enjoyed by his two brothers (both clergymen), or, if they should die, by his nephew, until the expiration of 30 years, when he supposed he should return to life, and then it was to revert to him. He also directed that his coffin should be fixed on a beam in his barn, which was to be locked and the key left inside, so that he might let himself out. Strange to say, the provisions of this certainly more than merely eccentric will were strictly observed. His executors let the coffin stay in a barn a day or two longer than the specified 30 years—namely, from February 1, 1721, to February 5, 1751—and then, as he showed no signs of rising, they took it out and buried it.

An old bachelor of Soho, a retired Change alley broker, for the last fourteen years of his life amused himself by going daily in the stage from London to Greenwich, and immediately returning in another stage coach.

THE KING'S CLUB.

Membership Is Exclusive and Limited in Number.

The Marlborough Club has an interesting history. It was founded by the late King Edward for his own use and that of his associates. Up till 1806 White's Club used to be the King's club. One day, however, an officious steward was unwise enough to call the Royal member's attention to the fact that he was breaking a rule of the Club by smoking a cigar on the ground floor.

Immediately the Prince of Wales left the Club, and neither he nor any of his associates ever again entered the premises. Instead, he founded the present Marlborough Club, which was so-called because it was situated so near Marlborough House.

It is interesting to note that no game of cards has been played in the Club for the last forty years, although in the early seventies the Prince would occasionally indulge in a certain amount of whist for high points. Instead the chief recreation of members is bowling, for which the Club possesses a fine alley.

Needless to say, the membership of the Club is very exclusive, and strictly limited in number. The members consist for the most part of individuals attached to the Royal Household. Ambassadors and diplomats and all distinguished foreign visitors are nominated for temporary or permanent membership.

TOUCHING STRIKE STORY

AN INCIDENT FROM A WELSH COAL-FIELD.

Poverty and Hunger Stalked Abroad in the Sedden Streets of Gwauncoed.

A strange man, Ivor Cerrig—a dour, saturnine individual, whose taciturnity towards his fellows had earned for him the sobriquet of "Ivor Grunt"!

A man of middle-age, but with hair already thin and grey, with stern features carved with deep, indented lines, and with once-stalwart frame bent with years of remorseless toiling at the face of the coal, says London Answers.

A man who still remained a riddle to his "butties," though it was now nigh ten years since he had brought his girl-wife to the "Hills" and carried his lamp into the Gwaun pits.

Now, as he stood peering through the rain-lashed window of the tiny cottage on the hillside, his face showed grey and grim in the deepening twilight. Rain and sleet had fallen intermittently throughout the brief November day; the failing light, the gaunt framework at the pit-head, crowned with idle sheaves that told of abandoned shafts and pulseless engines, towed beacon-like above the wreaths of driving mists, in what was verily a valley of desolation.

THE BLACK SILENCE.

To the east the lowering skies were crimsoned with the glare from the great steel works in the adjacent valley—a Tantalus glow, mocking, with its promise of warmth and comfort, the chilled heart of the man at the window; and Cerrig, with a muttered imprecation, turned again to the black silence hanging over the colliery yard below him, where a faint flicker of light in the power-house appeared only to accentuate the prevailing gloom.

For the shadow of industrial strife lay heavily across the Welsh coal-field, stilling the whirling wheels and quelling the clangor of loaded trams jolting over unstable rails. A month had elapsed since the word "down tools" had gone forth at Gwaun Collieries.

Only a month, but already the twin spectres of poverty and hunger stalked abroad in the codden streets of Gwauncoed. Scattered groups of strikers, listless and dispirited, loitered about the corners with wolfish eyes and belts tightened.

With the rest of the men, Ivor Cerrig had brought his tools out of the pit; with a sickening sense of helplessness he had taken his place in the long line stretching from the pay-office. And the strike might last for months.

A CRY OF DESPAIR.

Strangling a cry of despair in his throat, he swung from the window.

True there was a fire in the other room, but his wife lay asleep in there, and he would not risk wakening her by entering.

His wife! His poor lass! Heaven help her!

Like some fragile flower, she had been gradually fading ever since he had brought her into these bleak uplands. He remembered her a smiling maid and he had

When he emerged into the open, a dazed expression crept over his drawn features.

Had it all been a ghastly nightmare?

Stepping forward, he saw, with wondering eyes, a long procession winding through the valley from the institute. There were men cheering and women sobbing. And again the welkin rang with a joyous shout: "The strike is settled! The strike is settled!"

Going indoors, Ivor Cerrig fell on his knees beside his wife.

A TRUNKFUL OF G'S.

Exhibit That Mrs. Billtops Used for Mr. Billtop's Reformation.

"Ezra," said Mrs. Billtops to her admiring husband, "I have something here that I desire you should see," and as she spoke she first threw back the lid of a big trunk in the storeroom.

The trunk was full, level full, of a vast number of little things of uniform size that might have been oats or grains of wheat, but which upon a little closer inspection seemed to be small type letters.

"They are letters, Ezra," said Mrs. Billtops; "they are the g's you have dropped in the last three years."

And the meaning of this exhibit was clear to Mr. Billtops instantly; he was not a dull man, it was not necessary to hit him with a maul to make him understand things. Mr. Billtops has always been a great man for dropping his g's. Whether from carelessness or laziness or economy of speech, or whatever his prompting, he has always said seein' for seeing, and bein' for being, and doin' for doing, and this has always disturbed Mrs. Billtops. Time and again she has sought to get him in this respect to mend his ways, but the habit has proved too strong for him, and so finally she resolved to give him an object lesson.

"Three years ago, Ezra," she said, "unbeknown to you I began gathering up the g's you dropped in speaking. I started out to keep them in an empty fruit jar, but I soon found that you wouldn't do, in fact, I was appalled by the number I collected.

"I found that much as you had disturbed me in this way I had never realized how bad you were; so I began storing them in this trunk, and here you see, Ezra, a trunkful of g's that you have dropped in three years. Don't you think that is terrible?"

Mr. Billtops freely admitted that it certainly was; and then and there in the presence of that open trunk he vowed a reform. If she would throw away those gs, he said, right now, to the last one, he would most earnestly endeavor always to remember to make it ever impossible for her to start another collection.

William Lewis, Esq., of Llandisruan, who died on December 30, in the act of drinking a "tumber mawr"—that is, a cup of Welsh ale containing about a wine quart—had made it a rule in his life to read a certain number of chapters in the Bible every morning, and, by way of assisting in the digestion of so much spiritual food, to drink no less than eight gallons of ale every morning!

It was calculated by some mathematical genius of the time that in the course of his life Mr. Lewis must have drunk enough ale to float a 74-gun ship. His size was extraordinary. If we may believe the Gentleman's Magazine, he weighed 560 pounds and the diameter of his body was no less than six feet. Fortunately, says the writer of his obituary notice, he died in his parlor, for it would have been impossible to bring him downstairs in a coffin. Even as it was, the undertakers had to use a crane to lift the coffin on to a carriage, and to have the same machine in the churchyard to let it down into his grave.

CHILDREN WERE PRESENT.

"I see in the paper this morning," began Mr. Suburb at the breakfast table, that—"

"King's house is up for sale again, mother," remarked the eldest daughter. "I noticed the bill on the fence when I looked out of my window this morning. I don't believe Mr. King can afford to go for any holidays this year if that house isn't sold. What did you start to say, father?"

"I see in this morning's paper that the British—"

"Must be in an awful hurry this morning, Willie," said the second daughter, Bessie, to her small brother. "You're stuffing like a big pig. Stop making such a noise with your lips."

"Children, I'm a-bored of you," said Mrs. Suburb, reprovingly. "What is it you see in the paper this morning, Henry?"

"Salt," said Mr. Suburb, savagely. "Pass the salt."

WHEN BARONETS WERE BOLD.

The title of baronet is exactly three hundred years old. It was in the reign of Good King James that baronets first came into existence. To-day, you could hardly tell a baronet from a banker. But in the year 1611, when James I. needed ready-money, and created two hundred "little barons" to supply him with cash, they swaggered about in their baldrics and sashes, and behaved in the courtliest of fashions. Each baronet, in order to justify his title, had to maintain a small army of thirty soldiers for three years. In this way the crafty king not only increased his revenue, but actually lightened his expenses! It is not generally known that the title of "baronetess" has twice been bestowed on women. One of these was the mother of a Dutch general. The other was a Nottingham lady named Dame Maria Bolles, who won her way into the good graces of Charles I., and received the title from his hands.

MILES OF OFFENDERS

"I see in the paper this morning," began Mr. Suburb at the breakfast table, that—"

"Salt," said Mr. Suburb, savagely. "Pass the salt."

MILES OF OFFENDERS

If all the people convicted last year of offences, great and small, in England, Scotland, and Ireland, were placed side by side, they would form a rank more than 300 miles long, or from London to some distance beyond Paris. Of these the people guilty of really serious crimes—indictable offences—are nearly one-tenth, and they would cover thirty miles. There would be seven miles of men and women who committed assaults, eleven miles of beggars, thirty-three miles of thieves and robbers, forty-three miles of drunkards. The offenders sent to prison would extend to eighty-three miles, and those sentenced to pay a fine would form a rank about two hundred and thirty miles long. The cost of all these is so enormous in police, judges, and magistrates, court officials, prisons, and all the locks, bolts, safes, burglar alarms, and other defences, that if the workers necessary to earn the total amount of money required were placed side by side they would measure a line from fifty to sixty miles long.

No one was invited by the six gentlemen already mentioned, no bell was tolled, and there were none of the conventional signs of mourning. The coffin was painted green, and the deceased was laid in it with all his clothes on. Under his head was placed Saundon's Horace, at his feet Dentley's Milton; in his right hand was a small Greek Testament, in his left a small edition of Horace, while Bentley's edition of Horace was placed sub po-to help her!

Like some fragile flower, she had been gradually fading ever since he had brought her into these bleak uplands. He remembered her a dainty, laughing maid, and he had brought her to this!

"Ivor!"

The man raised his head, and again the same whispering came softly to his ears. "Ivor!"

He stole gently into the inner chamber to the bedside, and knelt beside the recumbent figure.

"You called me, Olwen?" he asked, softly. The harsh lines had vanished from his face.

Turning slightly to him, the woman smiled through her pallor.

"You're not gone to work then, Ivor?" she murmured.

FOR HIS WIFE'S SAKE.

"Not yet, cariad," he replied cheerfully; "the old engine is still out of action."

No word had reached her of the strike. He had taken care of that.

As he rose to warm a little milk on the expiring embers, his wife watched him.

For a while they talked, but eventually the invalid sank back into doze, and Cerrig, returning to the little kitchen, sat in the darkness, and thought long and bitterly. Then he rose.

"For her sake!" he muttered. "For her sake!"

* * * * *

The following day dawned drab and cheerless as Ivor Cerrig, blackleg, stood in the engine-house of the Gwawen No. 1 and removed all traces of his night's work from his face and hands. With the jingle of coins making sweet music in his ears, he left the dismal precincts of the pit and crossed the railway, and entered the town.

Then, with a neat package from the chemist's held tightly beneath his arm, he strode hurriedly and furtively along over the uneven pavement.

The few pedestrians he met seemed to stare at him accusingly, and more than once he could have sworn he heard the sibilant hiss of "Seab" hurled at him. And as he approached the square, the hub of the little mining community, he felt his throat contracting and his pulse throbbing violently, for a crowd of miners swirled about the doors of the workmen's institute, and a hoarse murmur mingled with the shrill treble of women.

There could only be one reason for the tumult—by some means they had discovered already that he—Ivor "Grunt"—had "ratted," and they had gathered to greet him. Even as Cerrig hesitated one of the men caught sight of him, and advanced.

GOOD NEWS.

There was only one thing for it—instinctively he turned to flee. He must get home first, he must deliver the precious parcel.

The next moment he was running like a startled hare, straight up the hill-side, like some hunted animal making for its lair. From somewhere behind him came a dull roar of many voices, but whether near or far he could not tell; and when at last he staggered into his own doorway his strength was near spent.

Thank Heaven his wife was asleep! He just brushed her forehead with his trembling lips, and then passed out to face his pursuers.

is not the pleasantest of experiences," declares a writer in the Wide World. "One buys a railway ticket in Japan in instalments.

"The ordinary ticket only enables one to go by a train covering the minimum distance in the maximum time, so an extra express ticket is purchased, which means that the engine moves a little more quickly toward its appointed goal.

"Next a platform ticket must be procured, to enable one to board the train, and finally one has to fight one's way into a first class carriage. Why do all the passengers in Japan take their luggage into the already painfully small carriage instead of leaving it in the van? and why, again, does a nation that is a password for cleanliness the world over possess a train service so shockingly dirty in every detail?

"We once, in a weak moment, looked into a stationmaster's room at a large station, and for pure dirt it could have given points to a dust heap. In the train carriages the floors are covered with the dirt of ages, cigarette ends, orange peel, sandwich papers; at intervals a porter saunters up with a brush and leisurely sweeps all the refuse into a corner, having first carefully closed every window, so that no atom of discomfort or infection shall be lost.

"Finally he departs, leaving behind him the rubbish and an atmosphere charged with germs and angry words. Truly a Japanese porter's definition of clearing up is removing rubbish from one place to another. To change clothing in a crowded carriage is merely a pastime to a Japanese traveller, and one may happily have a sigh of relief if nothing worse happens."

BAGGAGE SMASHER STORY.

Why This Familiar Tale is Missing From Current Literature.

"How is it," the traveller asked the railroad man, "that we don't hear any more stories now-a-days about the baggage smasher?"

"Well," said the railroad man, "more care in the handling of passengers' baggage is required now-a-days, for one thing; and as between the trunk smasher and the trunk maker the situation is about the same as that between the armored ship builder and the projectile manufacturer, first one is ahead and then the other. One day you may have a ship that can't be perforated, but the next day may put the projectile ahead.

"There have been improvements in trunk making as in all things else, and just now you find a good many trunks that are solid and rugged, well built and well adapted to stand the strain of travel and rough handling, hard to smash. With this advance in trunk building the trunk smasher is somewhat overmatched, placed at a disadvantage; and so the trunk smashing story goes, for a time at least, into a decline; but a new and greater and stronger breed of trunk smasher may at any moment arise; and if that day should come, why, then the trunk smasher will be again on top and we shall have a gladsome revival of trunk smashing stories with modern frills and attachments."

THE CANADIAN ORDER OF FORESTERS.

The Thirty-second Annual Meeting of High Court—The Sessions are Largely Attended—Most Representative Meeting Held in Years.

A large representation of delegates present at the opening session of High Court of the Canadian Order of Foresters betokened the deep interest throughout the Dominion in the welfare of this great fraternal Insurance Society, which now includes nearly 80,000 Canadians in its membership.

Great enthusiasm characterized the gathering, and rightly so, as the year just closed was the most successful in the history of the Order, and to this may be added the fact that the delegates are for the first time meeting in the commodious Assembly Hall of the Canadian Foresters' Building, 22 College street. The new building is up to date and thoroughly equipped, and is a credit to the members of the local Courts, who undertook the work and carried it to so successful an issue. The magnificent structure is a tribute to the spirit of fraternity, which prevails among the members of the City of Toronto, and the result of their united efforts is a splendid object lesson to the delegates from other centres.

The sessions of High Court were presided over by the High Chief Ranger, J. A. Stewart, and all the other High Court Officers were in attendance.

After receiving reports of the High Court Officers, which were distributed to the delegates in printed form, the meeting received the various civic deputations.

The report of J. A. Stewart, High Chief Ranger, was replete with facts and figures, showing the Order to be in a most flourishing condition, maintaining and even surpassing its record for previous years.

On the last of January, 1910, the Order had a membership of 73,985, and there were initiated during the year, 8,280 new members, being an increase of 911 over the previous year. During last year 3,663 members lapsed and 498 died, leaving the net membership at the close of the year 78,104.

The increase in the Insurance Reserve of the Order during the year, amounted to $276,186.13. On January 1st, 1910, the amount on hand in this Branch was $3,002,308.29, and at the close of the year, $3,287,494.42.

The standing of the High Court Sick and Funeral Benefit Branch is also most satisfactory. During the year no less a sum than $147,224.96, covering 6,132 claims, was paid in this Branch. The amount to the credit of this Fund at the commencement of the year was $170,773.82, and at the close $207,223.20.

The report of Geo. Faulkner, High Secretary, covering the general work of the Society, was next in order, and showed in detail the large volume of business transacted through his department.

The amount of Insurance Premiums received during the year was $644,077.82, which with the large sum of $133,690.75 derived from interest on investments, made the total receipts in this Branch $777,768.57. There were 498 Death Claims paid, amounting to $501,582.44, leaving the sum of $276,

WRITING TO HIS MAJESTY

CURIOS CIRCULARS RECEIVED BY THE KING.

All Letters Are Not Now Answered as in the Time of King Edward.

In one room of the Secretarial Department at Buckingham Palace there are two enormous waste-paper baskets of steel wire, and these are daily filled with useless circulars that are addressed to the King and the Prince of Wales, says London Answers.

His Majesty receives more trade-letters and circulars than anyone else in the United Kingdom—on the average some seven hundred a day.

Some years ago King Edward VII purchased a fine pair of tusks from a certain African trader, and subsequently he wrote every year.

King George, a few months after his accession, received a letter from the same trader, enclosing half a dozen elaborate sketches of elephants' tusks which the latter had for sale.

King George is a keen collector of curios and various works of art, and dealers in the antique in all parts of the world write to him when anything special comes into their hands.

Once or twice every year the proprietors of most of the chief hotels in Europe send letters to draw his Majesty's attention to their establishments, and usually enclose photographs of a special suite of rooms which can be reserved for Royal visitors.

Many hotel proprietors, too, quite commonly offer to refuse accommodation to any other guests

DURING A ROYAL VISIT.

As a matter of fact the King never makes a stipulation of this sort when he engages rooms at a hotel, but foreign Royalties frequently do.

All the European railways under government control, and a good many companies as well, send a time-table once a month to the King's private secretary, all the changes made in the time-table since the previous month being carefully marked in red. They are usually bound in calf or vellum.

These time-tables, by the way, are among the few contents of the Royal letter-bag in the way of circulars which are preserved; practically every other circular, as

AN UNGOVERNABLE TEMPER

SERIOUS PHASE OF HANDICAPPED HUMANITY.

A Man Writes of His Experiences of the Course of His Life.

Only those who have an absolute ungovernable temper know what a terrible handicap it is in life.

It has been my curse, and I think that in its way it is quite as serious as being deaf or blind, says a writer in London Answers. A man who is deaf or blind gains the sympathy of his fellow-creatures, but no sympathy is meted out to the sufferer from my own affliction.

A really bad temper is as awkward for the person who owns it as it is for those who are made to suffer.

Scores of times I have vowed to myself that I would master it, but I might just as well try to master the wind as control my rage when something occurs to rouse me thoroughly, and I have had to pay very dearly for the consequences many a time.

I believe I am as reasonable as other folk in the ordinary way, and I do not think trifling annoyances upset me as much as they affect most people; but when my temper comes to the surface, it sweeps all other feelings ruthlessly on one side, and for a time I am, more or less, at its mercy. It is as though some power takes possession of me and I am

MERE CLAY IN ITS HANDS.

Temper of the worst kind can transform dear friendship into hatred in a flash. People who ignored this weakness in me have incensed me, perhaps with a single taunting word, and turned me into a veritable tiger instantly. There comes a ferocious longing to avenge an injury (an injury, real or imaginary), a sweet joy in indulging that longing, and then the bitterest regret.

There must have been hundreds of occasions in my life when the result of this wild feeling has done me serious harm. I can now remember at least a dozen times when it has turned success into utter failure. Although I was fully conscious of the danger I was running into, I had to let my anger have its way.

I have heard people say that terrible tempers were a form of insanity, but I do not think so, for when thoroughly exasperated I never by any chance resort to brute force.

Once I hit a man, and afterwards I realized that, however much I wanted to strike a blow, I must refrain. Since then there have been moments of fury when I would have given untold gold to hit out, but I have never done so since. If it were insanity to be burdened with a temper such as mine, I should have thrown the consequences to the winds and hit out.

RED LIGHTS.

Quite recently I had violent neuralgia, which does not make one affable, when a man, imagining I was a dear old friend of his, gave me a mighty thump on the back by way of greeting. I turned round gasping with pain, and if ever a man

MARKS OF THE MURDERER

SECRET SIGN IMPRESSED UPON THE DEAD BODY.

During the Polish Uprising Traitors Were Branded With an "S."

In certain foreign countries the horrible custom of branding a victim is by no means uncommon. The victims of the dread Italian secret society known as the Camorra, for instance, are almost always marked with a black star-shaped sign, made by four slashes with a razor, dipped either in ink, or in gunpowder and water mixed into a paste.

The well-known Black Hand Society, again, takes its name from the fact that a sign resembling a human hand has frequently been found branded upon the bodies of its victims in New York.

The Black Hand, although operating in New York is, of course, an Italian organization, but the once dreaded Ku-Klux Klan was an American murder society pure and simple, and its victims used to be marked in similar fashion with the three letters "K.K.K." made after death by nine cuts with a Bowie knife.

The Ku-Kluxes were all old soldiers, who had fought on the southern side during the great American Civil War, and their object was to terrorise the freed negro slaves, and such southern whites as were inclined to help them. They committed frightful outrages, whole families, both black and white, being wiped out.

At length, in 1871, Congress resolved to put down the association, and the

was passed. This allowed the authorities to arrest suspected Ku-Kluxes, and to try them without a jury, and the result was that the murderous organization was soon suppressed. "Ku Klux," it may be mentioned, is meant to represent the click in cocking a gun.

During the tithe war in Ireland, again, the Moll Maguires, the Whiteboys, the Terryalls, and the many other secret murder societies that waged war against the "proctors" whose duty it was to collect the tithes, invented a very curious sign to show that their victims had been put to death in pursuit of a settled policy, and not merely to satisfy private vengeance.

After an "execution" had been carried out, usually shooting by a number of masked men hidden behind a hedge or stone wall, a big tom cat was borrowed from the nearest wayside cabin, the inhabitants of which were, of course, in full sympathy with the assassins. The body of the victim was then stripped to the waist, and the cat was dragged by the tail up and down and across the bare back. The result was a series of criss-cross scratches, inflicted by the claws of

THE FRIGHTENED ANIMAL.

Finally, it is at least a somewhat curious coincidence that the letter "S" was in constant use in this fashion in Poland in 1863-5, during the terrible series of political assassinations that marked the up-

The number of applications was 1,290 more than for the previous year.

Among those in attendance are the following:

J. A. Stewart, High Chief Ranger, Perth, Ontario; J. A. A. Brodeur, High Vice Chief Ranger, Montreal, Que.; Geo. Faulkner, High Secretary, Brantford, Ont.; Robt. Elliott, High Treasurer, Brantford, since the previous month being carefully marked in red. They are usually bound in calf or vellum.

These time-tables, by the way, are among the few contents of the Royal letter-bag in the way of circulars which are preserved; practically every other circular, as soon as it is opened, is consigned to the waste-paper basket.

The Prince of Wales has become the object of special attention to those who habitually circularise Royalty.

A Himalaya guide wrote to His Royal Highness, sending on copies of his credentials, and expressing a hope that the Prince would bear his name in mind if his Royal Highness should think of making an ascent of the Himalayas.

Offers of fishing and shooting in all parts of the world have simply poured into the young Prince in the past few months from various sporting syndicates. One of the most remarkable of these was an offer to provide the Prince of Wales with

A MONTH'S WHALE FISHING. Full particulars of how this rather out-of-the-way and exhilarating sport was to be had were given, and a detailed statement of the cost.

Apart from this sort of circular, there is probably not a philanthropic or charitable institution in the country which does not bring its existence under the notice of King George, at least once or twice a year, by sending in a printed report of its doings, and usually a letter expressing a hope that his Majesty will subscribe to its funds.

Obviously, it would be impossible for his Majesty to subscribe to anything like all of them; but, as it is, the King subscribes to over a thousand charitable institutions.

The King is also daily the recipient of an enormous number of begging-letters, and letters from cranks, eccentrics, and faddists of all sorts, asking his Majesty to use his influence to promote their particular views on various subjects.

In the late reign, the receipt of any letter addressed to the Sovereign, except it came from a person who was obviously demented, was usually acknowledged; but King George has altered this rule, which involved a great deal of work to the secretarial staff, and rather encouraged by no means desirable correspondents to address letters to the Sovereign.

In the future, no person who writes to the King will receive any sort of acknowledgment of his or her letter, unless in the opinion of the King's secretary it needs a reply.

CHRISTENING SHIPS.

The ceremony of breaking a bottle of wine over a ship's bows before launching has its origin in the ancient heathen belief that before starting out on any enterprise it was necessary to offer sacrifices to propitiate the gods. Wine has been used for christening ships of the Royal Navy for centuries, but occasionally there are departures from the custom. In 1905 when the Hibernia was launched at Dartmouth, a bottle of Irish whisky was broken over her bows as a compliment to her name. Sometimes the throwing of flowers is resorted to in France, and in Japan the usual custom is to suspend a cage of live birds over the bows. If the birds commence to sing when set free, it is considered a good omen.

The worst man you know probably considers himself the best. Don't confide in the person who is always confiding in you.

When your neighbor begins by saying, "Of course, it is none of my business, but—" it is a sign that he is going to make it his business.

After a man discovers how little he knows, he begins to realize that others probably do not know any more than he does.

Quite recently I had violent neuralgia, which does not make one affable, when a man, imagining I was a dear old friend of his, gave me a mighty thump on the back by way of greeting. I turned round gasping with pain, and if ever a man had murder in his soul, I had for thirty seconds. Fortunately, it is very few people who literally "see red" when they rise to a supreme passion. Red lights seemed to dance about in front of my eyes, and when the man who had struck me saw my expression, I really believe he was terrified. Even at that crisis I was sane enough to turn on my heel and walk away, although the effort to do so cost me more than anyone would imagine. Practically, I was a physical wreck for the rest of the day as the result of half a minute's frantic rage.

The man who can get up in the morning knowing that nothing could possibly ruffle his venerable tills me with envy. His day will run smoothly for him, and he will not be perpetually looking out for anseen disaster.

For the unfortunate wretch who has a diabolical temper lurking somewhere in his brain there can be nothing but unpleasantness in store.

WHERE LAUGHING IS ILLEGAL

A Man in Berlin, Germany, Hauled to Court for the Crime.

English law is occasionally subject to criticism, but for real comedy we are a long way behind Germany.

In Berlin recently an ironworker was sent to prison for a week because he laughed. Going along the street he saw a merry-maker being chased by a particularly stout policeman, and the sight tickled him. He was promptly hauled before the Court for scandal.

Another man attempted to get into a moving train, and fractured his leg. After six months in hospital he was discharged, cured, when the State Railways Department at once prosecuted him for breaking their regulations. The law-and-leg-breaker was fined $1.25.

Stepping into an omnibus a man trod on the foot of a lady, who was so annoyed that she said he walked like a hen. She was fined $5 for using this term of reproach.

Claire Waldoff, the Berlin singer, outwitted the police, however. She was warned that if she sang any of her songs on Easter Sunday there would be trouble. But the announcement was made that Claire Waldoff would positively appear. She did—so did the police. And she sang—the German National Anthem!

The promised prosecution did not take place.

WISE SAYINGS.

Don't give advice unless you know the kind that is required.

We all have acquaintances, but few of us have friends.

The worst man you know probably considers himself the best.

Don't confide in the person who is always confiding in you.

THE FRIGHTENED ANIMAL.

Finally, it is at least a somewhat curious coincidence that the letter "S" was in constant use in this fashion in Poland in 1863-5, during the terrible series of political assassinations that marked the uprisings of the Poles against their Russian oppressors.

It was usual, too, to cut it upon each cheek of the victims, although sometimes the sign was actually branded on the flesh, by means of a horseshoe made red-hot and roughly twisted into the shape of the letter in question.

The assassins who committed these political murders at the order of the "National Committee" of the insurgents were called "Stiletzki," that is to say "stiletto men," because of the long, keen stilettos, or daggers, which they used upon their victims, and the letter "S" therefore stood for a double warning.

I meant that the dead man upon whom the brand was found was a "szpion," or "spy," a traitor to the national cause, and that he had been cut to death for his treachery by the "Stiletzki."

HOME OF MONSTERS.

Reptiles Which Weigh Nearly a Quarter of a Ton.

The Galapagos Islands are of extreme interest to naturalists, since they form a connecting link between the animal life of the twentieth century and remote prehistoric times.

Here, and here only, are to be found the giant tortoises, survivors of the reptilian age, when there were as yet no mammals, and all sorts of huge reptiles held sway upon the earth.

The islands lie in the Pacific Ocean, some 730 miles west of the coast of Ecuador, and are so inaccessible rugged, and mountainous, that they were until quite recently very little visited and comparatively unknown. It is owing to this fact, no doubt, that these monster tortoises have survived there, although they and all their relations became extinct everywhere else in the world probably thousands of years ago.

Some of these reptiles weigh nearly a quarter of a ton, and they are remarkably long-lived, many of them being three and four hundred years old. They are, however, almost extinct in their wild state, owing to their having of late years been so persistently hunted for natural history collections.

The last great haul was made in 1898, when an expedition organized by the Hon. Walter Rothschild visited the islands and brought away sixty tortoises of ages varying between 100 and 400 years.

Since then there have been other minor raids made upon them, and it is estimated that there are probably not now more than about a score of the giants left on the islands.

To-Night.

The explorations of Arthur Biosy in Yucatan brought to light many new facts about the stupendous ruins which stretch through the country in a chain 300 miles long. The most amazing thing about these ruins, according to Mr. Biosy, is that the people who possessed such high architectural skill and the knowledge of rich and graceful decorative arts, belonged to the stone age and had no knowledge of metals. These wonders in stone were carved with flint implements and a civilization which has been compared to that of Egypt grew up without even the use of bronze and iron.

Death of John Valentine.

John Valentine one of the most progressive and highly respected farmers of Ernestown passed away very suddenly at the Kingston General Hospital on Tuesday evening. Mr. Valentine was in Napanee on Thursday last attending the Liberal meeting and was apparently well though not feeling very good. On Friday he was taken very ill, was worse on Saturday and on Sunday Mr. Austin Robinson took him to Kingston General Hospital. Arriving at the hospital about 6 p. m. an operation for appendicitis was performed at 8 o'clock and was apparently successful as Mr. Valentine was resting easily until Monday when Mr. Robinson returned home. On Tuesday however he took worse and the family were summoned but arrived half an hour after he had passed away. Mr. Valentine was the possessor of one of the finest farms in Ernestown township with splendid buildings and was a breeder and exhibitor of thoroughbred stock, particularly Holstein cattle on which he won many prizes annually. The remains were brought to his home at Violet where the funeral services were held on Thursday and the remains placed in Violet cemetery.

Besides his widow he leaves six children, Mrs. Ernest Parks and Kenneth, Ray, Percy, Eva and Grace at home. Mrs. Edward Wilson, Napanee is a sister of Mrs. Valentine and Mrs. Robert Boyes and Mrs. Balfour are aunts of hers.

The Trustees are endeavoring to arrange a Picnic on the old grounds for Monday, August 14th next. The Prince Edward Co. Old Boys and Girls hold their annual excursion from Toronto 7.30 a. m. Saturday August 12th to Picton, arriving at that hometown about noon and returning about 7 p. m. Monday the 14th by special train which will be held for the party. Tickets $2.55 adults and children half price for the round trip. The Mayor and friends of Picton are arranging to secure a steamer to carry all who may wish to go down to Adolphustown on Monday forenoon, landing at the site of the old church wharf on the south side of Hay Bay, (which by the way, will be made safe for the occasion.) During the stay at the old church, if time permits, an impromptu service will be held and speeches made by Rev. Dr. Carman, General Superintendent, and others, and old songs and tunes sung and a general good time is hoped for. The object is thus early foreshadowing this outing is that the people of Prince Edward and the people of Lennox and Addington may know about it in good time so that they may make all arrangements to be on hand. The Trustees appointed by the late General Conference of the Methodist church have been promised $500 by the Bay of Quinte Conference at its last session in Port Hope; and the friends outside will endeavor to raise the balance necessary to complete the repairs now being made on the building so it may stand the storms of another century. Cut this out and stick it on your bedroom Mirror and be prepared for the occasion. Trustees—A. R. Davis, Chairman; John N. Lake, Sec. & Treas., C. C. James, Fred L. Hooper, Geo. Ruttan.

NORTHBROOK.

Prospects are that Bon Echo park, which is owned by the Bon Echo company, of Toronto, and superintended by Mr. Dennison, will be enjoyed by a far greater number of guests this season than have ever before visited this beautiful spot. We believe Bon Echo to be one of the most ideal, healthy, charming, picturesque and pleasure affording retreats in Canada. The automobile transfer used to convey the guests from Kaladar Station is already busy. A carload of provisions including delicacies of all kinds has been taken to the park.

The prospectors working on the famous Massanaga rock, at Bon Echo, are in high anticipation of finding the long sought Myer's Cave. Stick to it brave boys, the reward is to those that persevere.

The Ore Chimney mine owned by the Ore Chimney Mining company, of Buffalo, which has for the past six months been under the sole management of J. A. Jimerson, is proving to be a great success and everything seems to be working perfectly, the shaft is being lowered very speedily and the ore is continually becoming richer in the precious metals sought for. The mechanical arrangement of the machinery and the location of the buildings together with the kind of machinery used to equip the mine, all speak very highly of the engineering skill of the manager, the workmen employed are only those who are men of experience and any who are not found to be practical and agreeable are immediately discharged. We expect that this mine will be a great boon to this part of the country.

The Cobalt-Frontenac Mining company, of Hamilton, is also operating a mine near the Ore Chimney, which is turning out some very fine ore. This mine is under the management of Wm. Atkins, of Northbrook. We cannot speak too highly of Mr. Atkins regarding his ability to fill this position. His years of experience in the mining business, together with the knowledge gained while acting as chief engineer for the Ore Chimney Mining company, during the opening and developing of their mine until he went with the Cobalt company.

"Oh, Lucy dear, there really can't be such a difference between one tea and another."

"I thought that too, Marie, till I used Red Rose. Just you try it, dear."

Sudden Death.

Monday evening a very sudden death occurred in Napanee when Mrs. John Williams, passed away after but a short hour's illness. The deceased had always enjoyed fairly good health but on Sunday she was not feeling very well, the cause being attributed to the extremely hot weather. Monday morning she had apparently regained her usual good health, but during the day she suffered a similar attack of the indisposition of the day previous. However this passed away and nothing serious was even dreamed of. About eight o'clock she was again stricken and became unconscious and in spite of every effort she passed away in a very short time. The cause of her sudden demise is attributed to heart failure. Deceased was a daughter of the late Gilbert Markle, and leaves besides her sorrowing husband, three brothers and one sister, who are Messrs. Martin and Charles, of Napanee; Frank, of Cornwall; and Mrs. Albert Wagar, residing in the United States. Much sympathy is felt for the bereaved husband and sorrowing family. The last sad rites were performed over the deceased on Wednesday and the remains interred in Riverview cemetery.

Shake the bottle and take as directed and in 48 hours Four T's will shake your cold. Look for the four red T's. Price 25c.

Impartial.

"What did the captain of the vessel do when he found the men were not disposed to do their full duty?"

"He gave up the voyage and docked the vessel."

"What then?"

"Then he docked the crew."—Baltimore American.

How blessings brighten as they take their flight!—Young.

during the opening and developing of their mine until he went with the Cobalt-Frontenac Mining company, about six months ago, makes us feel that he is the right man in the right place. We expect, too, that this mine will, in the near future, be the scene of great activities.

Turned the Tables.

Two hunters, returning from the Catskills, decided to try some New York city humor upon the agent of a little railroad station in the foothills. "When does the 3:49 train get in?" asked one.

The old man regarded him seriously and at length. "Waal," said he, "she generally gets in just a little behind the engine."

Later they approached him respectfully. "About time that train is due, isn't it, uncle?"

"Yes," said the agent, "she's about due. There comes the conductor's dog."—Everybody's.

Dauntless.

"He cleared the sill at a bound and vanished in the darkness," related Romance breathlessly.

"But," scoffed Realism, "only a moment ago he was riveted to the spot. Did he file the rivets?"

"Oh, no!" rejoined Romance, nothing daunted. "Fortunately it was only a small spot, so that by a superhuman effort he wrenched it loose and carried it along with him."—Puck.

Try this Thirsty Flour

A very thirsty flour. Absorbs a lot of water. Because it contains so much gluten.

Manitoba wheat is wonderfully rich in sturdy gluten.

And, think of it, FIVE ROSES is milled exclusively from the very cream of the Manitoba wheat berries.

So FIVE ROSES must be awfully thirsty, don't you see.

In your mixing bowl it greedily absorbs more water.

So you get more loaves than usual without using more flour. You use less.

Your flour lasts longer, doesn't it?

Less trips to your dealer.

That's how FIVE ROSES saves money.

Actually saves YOU money.

Use this economical flour.
